Broad Inquiry Into D. C. Relief Voted by House

$5,000 Fund Inserted in Supply Bill to Pay for 'Complete' Study.

Help for Jobless Called a 'Racket'

By James D. Secrest.

A "complete" investigation of the Public Assistance Division of the District welfare department and its administration of unemployment relief funds was voted by the House yesterday as it considered the $45,827,322 supply bill.

An appropriation of $5,000 was inserted to finance the investigation by the House District Committee. The original amendment, sponsored by Representative Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, a member of the appropriations sub-commttee, proposed that the inquiry be conducted under supervision of the District Commissioners.

Chairman Collins, in defending the amendment, charged that the welfare department is disbursing public relief funds in a "de luxe" manner.

"Relief has gotten to be a racket in the District," he asserted.

Collins called attention to a published statement by Elwood Street, director of welfare, that he would welcome an investigation of the local relief administration.

Playground Plan Upheld.

Running a gantlet of sniping by members of the House District Committee, the bill experienced a rough and slow voyage yesterday, but Collins predicted that it will be passed late today.

While several minor points of order raised against legislative provisions were sustained, the subcommittee was victorious in the more important parliamentary tangles.

The change in administration of school playgrounds during summer vacation periods and after school hours from the Playground Department to the Community Center Department was sustained. Last year it was stricken on a point of order.

Obviously better fortified against parliamentary attacks than he was last year, Chairman Collins was able to convince the chairman, Representative Driver (Democrat), of Arkansas, that the transfer involved no alternation in existing law.

Representative Palmisano, chairman of the House District Committee, and Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the committee, led the onslaught on the legislative provisions. They were aided at times by other members.

Added Station Approved.

When the House adjourned for the day the members were embroiled in a controversy over whether or not Washington needs any additional policemen.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, made a motion that the police appropriation be increased $65,000 to employ 25 privates and seven officers, or enough additional policemen to man the old Second Precinct after it is reopened.

The Collins sub-committee had approved the precinct station res-

'Employables' See Ill Health a Boon

One Aged Person Lives for Full Month on Prunes Alone.

By Edward T. Folliard

A somber picture of what it means to be poor and out of work in Washington at a time when there are no relief funds for "employables"—individuals able to work but unable to find jobs—was drawn yesterday by a group of local clubwomen.

It was a picture of hunger and cold and despair. It depicted an aged woman who ate prunes (given her by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation) morning, afternoon and evening for a month because there was nothing else to eat. It portrayed a jobless father who contemplated suicide because then his children would be orphans and entitled to relief, and other fathers who deserted their families because that also is a way of getting them on relief.

500 Cases Investigated.

The picture was made up of facts gathered by 23 women, members of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women. They started out as skeptics.

"We thought that a lot we read in the newspapers was just hooey," said Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, leader of the group. "What we actually found appalled us."

Mrs. George B. Galloway reported on the case of A. B., a 38-year-old unskilled laborer, with a wife and 11 children, but no job. He was one of 500 who had been denied relief and whose cases were investigated by the clubwomen.

Free Lunches Denied.

"I went to visit the B family," said Mrs. Galloway in her report. "I found the mother and father with six children sitting in a room around a tiny stove in which they were burning an old wooden box. A can of condensed milk had been poured into a bottle and was being passed from baby to baby. That was all the food there was in the house.

"The oldest five children were in school. The mother said they were not getting free school lunches because the family was not on relief. The youngest children, who are 6 months, 16 months, 3 years, 4 years, 5 years and 6 years old, obviously needed clothes. But the mother said, 'We don't really need clothes because I can keep the children in the house, but we don't have anything to eat.'

Illness an Advantage.

"I took the family some food and asked the public assistance division as a special favor to investigate the case. A trained social case worker was sent to the house and discovered that the father had high blood pressure. This made it impossible for him to do the only kind of work for which he was qualified—unskilled labor—and consequently he was an 'unemployable.'

"It's a great advantage in the District to have high blood pressure, because then you're an 'unemployable' and you can go on relief. Mr. B. was sent to Gallinger

Democratic Split Perils Housing Bill

Southern and Western Senators Desert to Lodge Plan.

Recess Averts Move to Return Measure to Committee.

Senate approval of a conference report on the Administration's housing bill was endangered yesterday when several Southern and Western Democrats joined forces with Senate Republicans to force "prevailing wage" guarantees into the bill.

Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, who argued the wage amendment would nullify the low-cost housing program, recessed the Senate after a bipartisan alignment of Senators called for defeat of the report. The vote, which will come today, apparently will be close.

The split came when Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), of Massachusetts, whose prevailing wage amendment was eliminated in conference, called on the Senate to put it back in the bill. Lodge's motion was ruled out on a point of order. Prevailing wage advocates now seek to defeat the report so the amendment can be reinserted.

"Sabotage" Charged.

Senator Lodge, who openly opposed the housing program but offered the prevailing wage amendment, he said, "to perfect it," was charged with an attempt at "sabotage" by Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana.

"This is a lot of camouflage about doing something for the people who work," said Minton. "All he (Lodge) wants to do is put something in the bill so it will not work."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, went to the defense of Lodge.

The Lodge amendment, requiring prevailing wages be paid all labor employed under the housing program, was overwhelmingly written into the bill when the measure first was before the Senate.

Wheeler Defends Lodge.

"It isn't fair to members of the Senate who voted for it for somebody to get up here and say the prevailing wage amendment was intended to sabotage this bill," said Wheeler.

"It is extraordinary that a Senator, who was supported by 51 members of this body when he offered this amendment, including the Senator from New York (Robert F.

Tokyo Police Seize 15 as Communists

Tokyo (Tuesday), Feb. 1 (AP).—Metropolitan police made another drive against alleged Communists today, arresting 15 persons in early morning raids. Most of those arrested were government and private university professors.

In a similar roundup December 15 the police arrested 370 persons, including a member of Parliament and several professors. "The main point of their movement," the police said, "apparently was to lead a general revolution based on communism."

Widow Explains Trip With Hardy

MRS. ELIZABETH C. BUCHANAN.

Court Orders Doctor to Give Up Bullet That Hit U. S. Aide.

Mrs. Elizabeth Connor Buchanan, 34, Department of Justice law clerk, yesterday asserted she was with Russell Hardy, special assistant to the Attorney General, shortly before he was shot in Alexandria Saturday.

Widow of an Army officer, Mrs. Buchanan described the situation, "about which there is not the slightest reason to be secretive," as "most commonplace and unmysterious."

Police Want Bullet.

In the meantime, sharp disagreement broke out over ownership of the bullet that wounded Hardy. The attorney insisted that he was the rightful owner of the slug which was removed from his hip yesterday by Dr. Charles Stanley White.

It was understood, however, that Police Judge J. R. Duncan, of Alexandria, had issued a court order requiring Dr. White to turn the bullet over to Alexandria authorities. Confessing he was bewildered by the problem, Dr. White said last night that he would comply with the order when he received it. He added that he had never before been confronted with a legal tangle of this sort.

Hardy, who states he was shot by a panhandler after refusing to give him money, has denounced the Virginia police for "stupidity" and for "treating me as defendant instead of as witness."

Stopped at Hotel.

Mrs. Buchanan was said to have voluntarily prepared her statement when she had learned Hardy would not reveal her name for fear of embarrassing her.

The statement follows:

"This is a statement of facts concerning a most commonplace and unmysterious situation about which there is not the slightest reason to be secretive.

"Mr. Hardy and I had worked during most of Saturday afternoon on

Labor Board Right to Hear Cases Upheld

Brandeis, However, Says It Cannot Enforce Its Orders.

Supreme Court Affirms Its 'Exclusive Initial Jurisdiction.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Exclusive power of the National Labor Relations Board to conduct investigations and hold hearings on alleged violations of the labor relations act, without interference from the courts, yesterday was upheld by the Supreme Court.

At the same time the court pointed out the board has no power to enforce its own orders. No penalty accrues for disobeying a board order, the court made clear, until the order is affirmed by a Circuit Court of Appeals.

The National Labor Relations Board, the Supreme Court said, lacks authority to compel obedience to its own subpenas, but must apply to the District courts to force witnesses to testify or to produce written evidence.

Justice Brandeis ruled the labor board has "exclusive initial jurisdiction" and after "appropriate procedure" the Circuit Court of Appeals has the power of review. Brandeis said this provides "adequate opportunity to secure judicial protection against possible illegal action by the board."

In effect, the court held the Federal judiciary is without power to stop labor board hearings by injunctions or restraining orders. There was no dissent. All justices apparently joined in the Brandeis ruling except Justice Cardozo, who is ill.

Injunctions Were Sought.

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. had contended only through court injunctions could they prevent "irreparable damage" resulting from Labor Board hearings.

Brandeis said such a view would in effect "substitute the district court for the board as the tribunal to hear and determine what Congress declared the board exclusively should hear and determine in the first instance."

"The contention is at war with the long-settled rule of judicial administration that no one is entitled to judicial relief for a supposed or threatened injury until the prescribed administrative remedy has been exhausted."

The court upheld the board on similar tests involving the two shipbuilding companies. A Massachusetts Federal district court in May, 1936, issued preliminary injunctions restraining the board from holding hearings on alleged unfair labor practices by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, at its Fore River plant. The injunctions were affirmed by the First Circuit Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court ruled yesterday the district court was without authority to restrain the board and the Roosevelt's Plea for Big Navy Is Echoed at House Hearing.

World Arms Race.

Admiral William D. Leahy, Navy's ranking officer, told the House Naval Committee that the world situation is "far more threatening than at any time since 1918 and no improvement is in sight."

Strict neutrality as the only means of keeping America at peace was urged by Senator Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, before Washington Labor Peace Committee Forum. Felix Morley, editor of The Post, told the same audience American co-operation with "like-minded nations" is the most effective guarantee of world order.—Page 13.

Leahy's Warning.

By Sidney Olson.

The top-rank officer of the United States Navy painted a picture of world political conditions in unrelieved black before a Congressional committee yesterday, declaring the situation is "far more threatening than at any time since 1918 and no improvement is in sight."

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, told the House Naval Committee, which is considering President Roosevelt's request for a straight 20 per cent increase in the Navy, that "the threat of a general European conflict is ever present," and added gravely:

"At our own doors nothing stands in the way of the possible seizure or exploitation of the republics of South and Central America except the Monroe Doctrine, backed by such naval forces as the United States may have and the use of that force if the necessity should arise."

The tension, national and international, over the rearmament situation, was reflected in numerous developments during the day:

In Paris, William Bertrand, navy minister, announced he will seek cabinet approval of a huge increase in the French 1938 naval building program, according to the Associated Press.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican), California, demanded on the Senate floor to know "what is the foreign policy of the United States," insisting that "the Senate learn what the foreign policy of the United States is before it goes upon this journey that parallels one we took in 1917."

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, suggested to the Senate that European nations which now seek American co-operation in aiding China against Japan, turn over to the United States certain island possessions to be used as naval and air bases, in part payment of their World War debts to this country.

Chairman Arthur May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House

Riots in Mexico Minor Affairs, Governor Says

4 Slain, 2 Wounded in Uprising by Goldshirt Fascists.

Brownsville, Tex., Jan. 31.—Gov. Marte R. Gomez of the Mexican State of Tamaulipas tonight termed border clashes between armed bands and Mexican authorities minor incidents. He blamed the Dorados, or Gold Shirts, for "trying to make the American people think there is unrest in Mexico."

The Governor, who flew to Matamoros, across the border from here, from Victoria, State capital of Tamaulipas, said he was sure the situation would be under control within a few days.

"They couldn't even take a settlement, much less a state or nation," he said of the Gold Shirts, a Fascist organization opposed to the present Mexican administration.

The Gold Shirts are led by Gen. Nicolas Rodriguez, ranchman and journalist who was deported from Mexico two years ago. Recently he has been operating in the lower Rio Grande section of Texas and has boasted that he has 800,000 men ready to march on Mexico City.

Four men were slain and at least two wounded in clashes between Mexican federals and the armed bands.

Tension was high in Matamoros after the series of gunfights and the populace stayed indoors most of the day.

Mexican federal commanders of garrisons at Matamoros and Reynosa minimized the clashes, blaming them on factional ill feeling between Agarian groups and on gun runners.

[The Brownsville Herald said the outbreaks caused speculation among observers of Mexican politics as to whether vague talk of a growing revolutionary movement may have substantial background.

English Skipper, Wife Are Missing

The Spanish War.

A "pirate" submarine torpedoed and sank the British steamer Endymion off the Spanish east coast with a reported loss of 11 lives.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco made himself president-dictator of a reorganized Spanish insurgent regime while his troops pushed a new offensive in southern Spain.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, shocked by repeated bombardment of civilians in Spain, was reported planning another effort to "humanize" the Spanish civil war.—Page 5.

British Steamer Sunk.

By the United Press.

Barcelona, Spain, Jan. 31.—A "pirate" submarine torpedoed and sank the British steamer Endymion off the Spanish east coast early today with a loss of 11 lives, including the vessle's British captain and his wife, the loyalist defense ministry announced tonight.

The 887-ton steamer, out of Gibraltar, sank in four minutes off Cape Tinoso, 14 miles southwest of the loyalist naval base of Cartagena to which she was bound with a 1,700-ton cargo of coal.

Although the submarine rose out of the Mediterranean before firing the torpedo its exact identity was not established. The defense ministry merely said it was a rebel craft.

Among the 11 persons reported missing out of a crew of 15 was a control agent of the international nonintervention committee. He was identified as a Swede. Four of the crew were reported rescued.

With the exception of the control agent the victims were all British.

The incident was the first actual sinking of a neutral ship since the British, French and Italian navies began a Mediterranean patrol for "pirate" submarines and aircraft under the Nyon, Switzerland, accord of last September 12.

Franco Is "President."

Hendaye, France (on the Spanish Frontier), Jan. 31 (AP). — Gen. Francisco Franco made himself president-dictator of a reorganized Spanish insurgent regime today while his troops again sought to breach the government lines with an offensive in South Spain.

Heavy fighting went into its second day on the border off Badajos and Cordoba Provinces near the Almeda mercury mining region which the insurgents vainly sought to capture a year ago.

Reports from Government sources, while admitting Franco made initial gains in the southern campaign, said the government was now pressing a counteroffensive.

The new Franco government, which will have its parliamentary seat at Burgos in North Central Spain, included a number of prominent members of the national council with which Franco has been ruling since October, 1937, when he modeled it after the Italian grand council of fascism.

Dominicans Agree To Pay $750,000 to Haiti for Slayings

By the United Press

The Dominican government last night agreed to pay $750,000 idemnification to the republic of Haiti for the slaughter of several thousand Haitians on Dominican soil last October, thus ending a dispute that threatened the peace of both Caribbean countries for months.

The agreement was signed by representatives of both governments in the presence of the permanent commission of Washington under the Gondra treaty at the Pan-American Union.

It provided for payment of $250,000 U. S. currency upon ratification and $100,000 on January 31 each year thereafter until the total is paid.

Both governments further agreed to prevent illegal emigration of nationals and the Dominican government agreed to punish all guilty parties in the October events.

It was announced the marriage of the 42-year-old monarch and the 22-year-old countess, whose mother was American, would take place at the end of April.

U.S. Fleet Deploys Before San Pedro For 5-Day 'War'

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—Ninety-eight warships and 260 fighting planes deployed tonight to defend the Los Angeles harbor area.

This first concentration here of the United States fleet, ready for battle and under sealed orders, began five days of intensive war games off southern California. It is the initial test by the new commander in chief, Admiral Claude C. Bloch, of the complete fleet moving from the harbor under threat of attack.

Roosevelt Cadets Sit on Floor When Denied Big Apple Tunes

A sit-down strike of more than 200 student dancers in protest against the orchestra playing waltzes at direction of the faculty chaperone last night broke up the annual Regimental Ball of Roosevelt High School cadets in the school gymnasium.

The student couples sat down on the dance floor—the young men resplendent in full dress regimental uniforms, the young women in dainty evening dresses—and refused to get up until the orchestra played snappied number.

The ball—attended by nearly 1,000 persons who jammed the gimnasium—began with the playing of "Bugle Call Rag," an old standby of hot bands.

Many of the couples attending immediately broke into versions of the "Shag" and the "Big Apple."

It was then that the long succession of stately waltz tunes began. Student couple complained.

The leader of the orchestra—Jimmy Gantley—exponent of modern "swing" music at its swingiest—made a brief speech to the students in which he said he had been requested by Miss Helen White, faculty chaperone of the ball, to play waltzes and fox trots and "stay away from the hotter music."

The sit-down came after half a dozen waltzes had been played.

The strike lasted 15 minutes, but before it was abandoned the orchestra struck up "White Heat," a "red hot" number.

President Roosevelt "did not realize until the last few years how much influence America has in the world," he told more than 200 Protestant ministers yesterday.

"We have made great progress at home and I believe in making that progress we have had a great influence in other nations of the world," the President said to members of the City-Wide Protestant Ministers Association. "We have gone far in these years toward a greater human security and a greater social justice. We don't want to stop that progress. We want to keep on."

"We have a task," he continued, "not only for 4 years or 8 years or 20 years to come—but a task that lasts through all eternity. As long as we continue to make the progress we are making, we can look for a safer and better America in our own lifetimes."

"I cannot help feeling, from the testimony that comes to me day by day," the President said, "that there has been definite and distinct progress toward a spiritual reawakening" in the last four years. "I receive evidences of this," he added, "from all of our Protestant churches; I get it from Catholic priests and from Jewish rabbis as well."

The President declared that "it is a very significant thing that this awakening has come about in America. It makes me realize more fully that we do have, in addition to the duty we owe to our own people,

Roper to Open Parley Here on Small Business

Conference to Name Leaders to Talk With Roosevelt on Problems.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will open a conference tomorrow of small business men whose leaders, yet to be chosen by the conferees, President Roosevelt will consult regarding their business problems.

As Secretary Roper announced that the more than 800 invitations already issued were all that would be sent out, since an overflow attendance is anticipated, his chief aide, Ernest G. Draper, said the small business men's chief concern centered around obtaining Government loans. They were also opposed to high-pressure methods and installment buying principles of large industries, said Draper.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., stated that there was "no question" about the necessity of loans to small business men. He declined to say whether he believed such aid would be extended.

During the day, Morris Edwards, vice president of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce and John J. Behle, president of that city's Federated Civic Associations, left at the White House a petition signed by 5,350 Cincinnatians expressing serious concern about the "critical condition of business throughout the Nation."

The petition said the signers believed the condition "is caused largely by the uncertainty of outlook for business by reason of the legislative restrictions, punitive taxes, burden of strikes and Government competition with private enterprise with which commerce and industry have been saddled during the last few years." A 10-point program for restoration of confidence was suggested.

Draper's announcement also said there were 10 pressing problems of this small business group as indicated in their letters to the Commerce Department and Executive Mansion. They are:

1. Loans to small corporations.
2. Fair trade practices and prices, including monopolies.
3. Wages and hours legislation.
4. Housing.
5. Installment buying.
6. Unemployment.
7. Social security.
8. Government research for small business.
9. Development and location of small industries.
10. Miscellaneous subjects.

The so-called small business group comprises companies employing less than 500 workers and grossing not more than $1,000,000 annually.

The New Associate Justice

Harris & Ewing.

Stanley Reed, who took the oath of office as an associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court yesterday, is pictured in his judicial robes for the first time.

By the Associated Press.

Stanley Reed, of Kentucky, swore yesterday to "do equal right to the poor and to the rich" and then took his seat on the Supreme Court as President Roosevelt's second appointee.

The brief ceremony over, the court proceeded immediately with reading of opinions and hearings arguments.

Sheppard Moves for $26,000,000 Building to House All War Department Offices.

A bill authorizing appropriation of $3,000,000 for a site and to begin construction of a new War Department Building ultimately to cost $26,000,000 was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman Morris Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

At present, Army administrative offices are housed in 19 buildings in Washington and Alexandria. Construction of a suitable building to permit unification of administration has been recommended consistently by Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring. Last year President Roosevelt said if any new Government buildings were to be provided the War Department was entitled to consideration.

Creation of a Senate-House committee to investigate all phases of monopolies, public and private, and all proposals for elimination of monopolistic practices was proposed in a resolution by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas. "This investigation should be done on the basis of long-term study and not merely be a political circus," declared the Texan.

A House sub-committee moved to revive the national textile bill which would regulate hours and wages of 1,250,000 workers in the industry.

Chairman Keller (Democrat), Illinois, of a House Labor sub-committee which has been considering the measure since last year, declared his sub-committee would report the measure to the Labor Committee within a few days.

The textile bill, providing for a 40-hour week and minimum wages of $15 a week, was sidetracked last year by the wage-hour bill.

Army Engineers' Chief Clerk Quits

Claude Lindsey, chief clerk in the office of the chief of Army Engineers, was retired yesterday after 43 years of Government service.

A veteran of the Spanish-American War and the Philippines Insurrection, he served in France in the World War as chief clerk of the Army Air Corps.

Enlisting in the Army in 1893, Lindsey participated in the Santiago campaign and was transferred to the Philippines in 1899. The following year he joined the staff of the city engineer of Manila and later served as disbursing officer and assistant to the director of public work there.

He returned to the United States in 1916 and was transferred to the Army Engineer department to compile an index and digest of annual reports of the chief of Engineers from 1866 until 1917. After service in France he returned to this country and completed the digest and index and was appointed chief clerk to the chief of Engineers in 1922.

Goering to Create Economic Council

Berlin, Jan. 31 (AP).—Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, head of the Reich's four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency, today announced creation of a national economic defense council.

Its purpose, said the announcement, "is to render it certain that German economy can meet all demands necessary for the security of the German people."

Germans who have rendered special service in economics will be summoned to join and to take a special oath of loyalty to Chancellor Hitler.

U. S. Again to Buy Silver of Mexico

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury offered yesterday to purchase 5,000,000 ounces of silver from Mexico during February, ending reports the silver purchase program might be used for reprisals against recent Mexican tariff increases.

The purchase offer was similar to other commitments made each month for more than a year.

In accordance with monthly practice, the Treasury also offered to buy 2,000,000 ouces or silver from Canada in February.

Haas Adjures C. I. O. to Make Labor Peace

U. M. W. A. Convention Adopts Condemnation of Senator Holt.

Resuming convention sessions in the Rialto Theater, the United Mine Workers of America yesterday heard two appeals for peace—one for world peace and another for settlement of differences with the American Federation of Labor.

The Rev. Francis J. Haas, former labor consultant to the NRA, pleaded for harmony in labor and presented a three-point program for unity. His remarks were greeted by only a fluttering of applause.

The Catholic clergyman urged the C. I. O. and A. F. L. to discontinue arguments over which side and which issue caused termination of negotiations on December 20; asked that each faction present concessions representing their "best offer" and that both sides agree immediately on a time for resuming conferences.

Boycott Plan Adopted.

Calling for international peace and condemning "fascist aggressors," a resolution was adopted proposing an economic boycott of Japanese manufactured goods in this country.

Earlier in the day, the convention assailed Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, as a "traitor unworthy to represent the great State of West Virginia."

Amid boos and hisses, a resolution attacking Holt's activities was read and adopted. It read in part:

"His (Holt's) action in opposing every progressive piece of legislation that has for its purpose the betterment of the life, the betterment of the living conditions of the people in this country brands him as a traitor unworthy of representing in the United States Senate the great State of West Virginia."

Lewis Voted Support.

In subsequent action, the mine workers directed John L. Lewis to carry on the C. I. O. and voted him unlimited financial support.

Less than a dozen of the 2,000 delegates voted against the resolution. Joseph Frantz, jr., of Williams, Okla., proposed to limit financial contributions.

"We want to know what it's going to cost and who is going to get the money," he said.

Striking at "violent opposition from anti-labor employers and the corrupt A. F. of L." in seeking to keep collective bargaining from the maritime industry, the convention voted to support union efforts among workers in the merchant marine.

Guffey Praises C. I. O.

The miners voted also to urge all local unions to establish affiliations with local and State organizations of Labor's Nonpartisan League.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, lauded work of the C. I. O. and said that "President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis have done more for mankind than any other men."

In a resolution calling for a "clean-up" of "bloody" Harlan County, Ky., the convention instructed its executive board to continue corrective efforts until "economic security, social justice and political freedom is brought to every man, woman and child in Harlan County."

A. F. L. Weighs "War."

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced tonight his executive council was ready to consider a formal declaration of war on the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The method of taking such action would be to revoke charters of one or all of 10 C. I. O. unions, now under suspension from the federation on charges of fomenting dual unionism. Green said discussion of such a step probably would begin tomorrow.

In August, 1936, the council suspended the 10 insurgent unions which had banded behind C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis.

Tonight Green rejected the peace proposal by the Rev. Francis J. Haas, Federal mediator and member of the old National Labor Board.

Haas offered as a basis for solution: (1) that both factions cease fixing respnosibility for continued strife; (2), that, on this basis, the two appoint committees to meet with each other on a specified date and agree these committees shall sit until truce is attained.

Mine Workers Ask U.S. Aid A.F.L.-C.I.O Peace

Denver, Jan. 31 (AP).—A resolution urging the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization to compose their differences was sent to the United States Department of Labor today by the executive board of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, a C. I. O. affiliate.

The board recommended that the Labor Department poll members of unions affiliated with both groups for suggestions on a peace plan.

Slap 'Regrets' By Tokyo Held Partial Answer

Apology Accepted, But U.S. Awaits Reply on Series of Incidents.

The State Department yesterday accepted the Japanese government's "profound regrets" for the slapping of John M. Allison, third secretary of the American Embassy at Nanking, by a Japanese sentry.

The fourth serious incident in the series between the two governments is not closed, however, by this acceptance, the State Department indicated.

Officials expressed satisfaction at the prompt apology, but noted that this slapping was not an isolated case of irregular entry of American property and of disregard of American rights by Japanese soldiers.

U. S. Waits Full Reply.

The department thus awaits a full reply to the note of protest over the series of incidents given Japan on January 17, as well as reparations for the sinking of the gunboat Panay and notice that those responsible for the Panay sinking have been punished.

The Japanese government, through its vice minister of foreign affairs, communicated orally with American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew its regrets for the slapping, assurances that suitable punishment will be meted out and promises of thorough investigation.

Allison reported to the department that a Maj. Hongo had informed him that after a preliminary investigation the commanding officer and 20 men of the unit concerned were under trial by court-martial. Maj. Hongo also told Allison, the department stated, that he realized there had been a misunderstanding with regard to Mr. Allison's having insulted the Japanese army, and that the matter had been explained to the higher military authorities.

Marines to Leave China.

Allison's report noted the slapping had occurred when he accompanied Japanese consular policemen and gendarmes on a visit to a Japanese-occupied building to investigate a Chinese woman's complaint that Japanese soldiers had abducted her from Nanking University, an American institution, and raped her three times.

The Navy Department announced meanwhile that the approximately 1,500 Marines who were sent from San Diego to Shanghai last August would be transferred next month to Honolulu.

The announcement did not indicate whether the Marines would be permanently stationed at Pearl Harbor to augment American forces there, and said only that they were "no longer needed" in Shanghai. They Will sail February 18 on the naval transport Chaumont.

The Fourth Regiment, of 60 officers and 1,000 men, will remain at Shanghai, where it has been stationed since 1927.

Production Cuts Injure Nation, Nourse Avers

Madison, Wis., Jan. 31 (AP).—E. G. Nourse, director of the Brookings Institute of Washington, told a Wisconsin farm and home week audience today that high prices brought about by restriction of production retarded rather than promoted national prosperity.

He said, "I hope the national efforts of organized agriculture will be directed toward stimulating the productivity of business and labor rather than toward new efforts at competitive restriction as a means of getting nominally high prices."

Wilson Claims Nation Favors Soil Program

Atlanta, Jan. 31 (AP).—M. L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture, said today he believed the Nation had become "soil conservation conscious" and the Federal, State and farmers' program to save soil would become permanent.

He presided at a conference of 100 soil conservation workers from Southeastern States who met prior to opening of the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Southern Agricultural Workers' Association.

Barkley Invites Chandler Race, Refusing 'Deal'

Alleges Conspiracy to Put Governor in Logan's Senate Seat.

By the Associated Press.

Democratic Senate Leader Alben Barkley invited a re-election battle with Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler, of Kentucky, last night, declaring he was unwilling to enter into a "conspiracy" to give Senator Logan, of Kentucky, a judgeship and thus create a Senate vacancy for the Governor.

The Senate leader's statement was issued after White House calls by Gov. Chandler and John Young Brown and Thomas S. Rhea, anti-Chandler men.

In a formal statement, Barkley told reporters:

"For months I have been threatened from Frankfort (Kentucky capital) with opposition in my race for re-election to the Senate unless I entered into a conspiracy which would have involved Senator Logan, the President of the United States and me, to find some way to eliminate Senator Logan from the Senate by appointing him to something else in order to avoid opposition to me.

"I am proud to say to the people of Kentucky that I join Senator Logan in his lofty attitude in regard to this matter and I wish to say that if anybody in the State desires to run against me because I have not been willing to stoop to the despicable expediency involved in all these threats, I welcome such opposition."

Some persons had suggested that Logan might be appointed to succeed the late Justice Charles H. Moorman, of Louisville.

Reno Trial Threat Laid to U. S. Aide

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—A Government witness in the Federal suit to wreck an alleged multi-million-dollar Reno, Nev., bunco gang testified today an assistant United States attorney had threatened to bash his head in.

The witness, Cullen Friswold, alias Fred Walsinger, confessed "steerer" for confidence games, asserted W. Mahlon Dickerson, Federal attorney, had threatened him with bodily harm two weeks ago, before the present trial opened, because he was "slow in answering questions."

Gen. Markham to Head Public Works in N.Y.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia announced tonight the appointment of Gen. Edward M. Markham, 60, former chief of Army Engineers, as commissioner of public works. The municipal budget provides $10,000 a year for the post, created by the new city charter. Gen. Markham from 1906 until 1912 was assistant engineer of the District of Columbia.

Sen. Bone Asks Mandatory Act For Neutrality

Fears World War Unless Policy Is Altered, Backs Program of V. F. W.

By the United Press.

Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington, last night warned that unless the United States adopts a definite policy of mandatory neutrality, the Nation may become involved in another world war where the "only victor would be death."

A member of the Senate's mandatory neutrality bloc and the Naval Affairs Committee, Bone spoke over a national hook-up of the Mutual Broadcasting Co., indorsing the four-point peace program advocated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars during their recent encampment at Buffalo, N. Y.

The V. F. W. program calls for:

1. Abandonment of international relations that would obligate the use of troops beyond the boundaries and territorial waters of the United States.
2. Mandatory neutrality.
3. Preparedness which shall be used only to prevent aggression against this country.
4. Withdrawal of American nationals and American armed forces from war zones.

U.S. Aide's Wife Kills Herself, Cause Mystery

A few minutes after a cheerful conversation with a neighbor about the redecoration of her new apartment yesterday, Mrs. Mary B. Wolf, 27, drove to a lonely road and fired a bullet through her temple.

The attractive brunette's body was found in her automobile, about noon, in a field bordering on Riggs road, 100 yards west of the District line. She was in the driver's seat, her right hand clutching a .25-caliber automatic pistol.

Ruts under the wheel indicated Mrs. Wolf tried to drive the car farther into the field, but was prevented by mud.

Never Talked of Death.

Police, summoned by two colored men who discovered the car, found two shells in the car. One bullet, buried in the upholstery of the back seat, apparently was fired to test the gun. The second bullet entered the right temple and caused death.

The body was taken to the District Morgue, and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide last night. No farewell notes could be found in her apartment, 700 Madison street northwest.

The woman's husband, Arthur Wolf, a food and drug inspector for the Department of Agriculture, said she had been in good health. He added that, although she was impetuous by temperament, she had never talked of suicide.

Was "Cheerful Person."

Mrs. Peter F. Snyder, of 1353 Montague street, is believed to be the last person to talk with Mrs. Wolf. Her house is next to that of Mrs. Arthur Cook, 1355 Montague street, with whom Mr. and Mrs. Wolf boarded until last Saturday.

According to Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Wolf called on her about 11 a. m. yesterday to make arrangements for discontinuing delivery of their newspaper at the Montague street house. The young woman seemed in the best of spirits, Mrs. Snyder said, although she complained of being fatigued by the task of settling her new home.

Wolf corroborated Mrs. Snyder's account of his wife's mood. She seemed very happy when he left for work yesterday morning, he said. Benjamin Duke, colored janitor of the Madison street apartment, stated that despite their short acquaintance he considered her "the cheerfulest person I ever saw."

According to Wolf, the gun which caused his wife's death is one which he keeps in the glove compartment of his automobile.

The body was identified by means of receipts in Mrs. Wolf's purse. A notation on the back of one paper stated Wolf's name and telephone number, followed by the word "husband" in parentheses.

The Wolfs moved here from Houma, La., in November. The automobile still bears 1937 Louisiana plates.

They had been married about three years and had no children. Mrs. Wolf's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grossman, of Boston. The body was shipped to Boston for burial last night.

Steiwer Gives Up His Seat in Senate

By the Associated Press.

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, voluntarily gave up yesterday the Senate seat he had occupied since 1927, to return to private law office. He will be succeeded by A. Evan Reams, named last week by Gov. Martin.

Minority Leader McNary (Republican), Oregon, announcing Steiwer's resignation to the Senate, said, "I feel regret close akin to grief."

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, declared Steiwer was "diligent and industrious." Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, called his retirement "a national calamity," asserting he "had a breadth of vision as wide as the Nation."

Girl Denies Car Ran Over Sleuth

Newark, N. J., Jan. 31 (AP).—Isabelle Messmer, 21, pleaded innocent today to a charge of atrocious assault and was held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury by Police Court Judge Carl J. Duveneck.

Police charged her with running down a detective who sought to question her and then leading police on an 80-mile-an-hour chase.

Miami police said Miss Messmer had been arrested there on robbery, concealed weapons and vagrancy charges, and the records showed other arrests at Washington, Pittsburgh, Houston, Tex., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Bailey, 7 Aides Held in Lottery For Grand Jury

Alleged 'Numbers' Boss Pleads Not Guilty; 10 Face Gaming Trial.

Pleading not guilty, Carroll Bailey, 34, alleged "numbers" boss, and seven aides were held to the grand jury yesterday on lottery charges.

Ten other persons also were ordered held on charges of conspiring to set up a gaming table in connection with four raids on suspected bookmaking establishments last Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Prospects of more activity in the tobacco industry this season than last, with more tobacco grown, more used, more exported and higher prices, were noted yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The bureau said that with substantially larger crops of flue-cured and Burley, prices of the former have averaged higher and that Burley prices were expected to average above those of most recent years.

It said the supply of Maryland tobacco on January 1, the beginning of the marketing year for that type, was smaller than a year ago and that the outlook was considered favorable for the coming months.

Bodies of Four Youths Found in Burned Club

Ashland City, Tenn., Jan. 31 (AP). The charred bodies of four youths who sought shelter in a vacant clubhouse near here were found today in ashes of the building. The dead were identified as Bob Williams, 16; Carney Brizentine, 25; Bertrand Spicer, 18, and F. M. Simpkins, 21. All resided in this section. The fire was believed to have been started by the youths to keep them warm last night.

Cabby Who Found Gun in Taxi Solves 14 N. Y. Robberies

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Officials who revoked Cabby Joseph Olesky's license last June after he reported to police finding a revolver in his taxi, told him his only hope for reinstatement was to find the man who abandoned the gun.

Olesky patroled poolrooms nightly along First avenue. Last night he sighted Leo Golla, 30, and told detectives Golla was the man.

In felony court today Golla was held in $5,000 bail after police told the judge he admitted 14 robberies. Olesky, police said, now has a good chance to get his license back.

Jobless Aid $150,387 In Initial Five Days

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board announced yesterday unemployment benefit checks totaling $150,387 were sent to 14,908 eligible unemployed workers in 10 States during the first five days of benefit payments.

Payments included: Maryland, $35,443 to 3,976 persons; West Virginia, $23,827 to 2,464 persons.

The board said since these States required a "waiting period" of only two weeks they were the first to make the payments.

Triangle Killer Was Sterilized, Doctor Testifies

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.—The defense at the murder trial of Paul A. Wright formally introduced medical evidence today that Wright underwent a sterilization operation for the sake of the wife he is accused of murdering.

The evidence, in the form of a deposition by the doctor who performed the operation, was read by Jerry Giesler, attorney for Wright.

In the deposition, Dr. Charles B. Huggins testified he treated the defendant's wife, Evelyn, and that her ailment, in his opinion, made it inadvisable for her to have another child.

Dr. Huggins said Wright offered to submit to a sterilization operation so his wife would not be endangered.

"Why was it performed on Mr. Wright rather than on Mrs. Wright?" Dr. Huggins was asked.

"Because of her health and danger of morbidity," was the reply.

"I think that a man who had undergone such an operation would be more likely to suffer shock if he suddenly saw his wife being unfaithful."

This testimony was in support of the defense argument that Wright was so upset when he found his wife and friend, John Kimmel, embracing that he was temporarily blinded with rage and shot them both to death.

Testimony that for days after Wright shot his wife and friend to death he could not remember details of the tragedy was given earlier by Dr. Charles H. Cowan. Cowan told the court he visited Wright's jail cell several times and Wright continually repeated:

"I found my wife cheating and I guess I went nuts. I'm trying to figure out what happened."

Woman to Be Deported.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (AP).—Violet Wells Norton, middle-aged housewife who claimed Clark Gable, film hero, was the father of her daughter, will be deported to Canada Wednesday, her attorney, Morris Lavine, announced today. She had been in jail at Santa Ana.

Labor Board's Power to Hear Cases Upheld

Court

Reed Is Sworn In.

In the other case the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. had sought similar injunction to block Labor Board hearings on alleged interference with employee-self organization.

The Federal District Court for Eastern Virginia denied the injunction and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals also refused to intervene. Brandeis yesterday upheld the action of these two lower tribunals.

To prevent the board from conducting a public investigation in such cases, the justice ruled, "would in a large measure defeat the purpose of the legislation."

The two decisions, outstanding among a score of Supreme Court rulings, followed administration of the oath to Justice Stanley Reed, former Solicitor General, President Roosevelt's second appointment to the court. Reed took the simple oath to "do equal right to the poor and to the rich," from Charles E. Cropley, court clerk. A crowded courtroom saw him solemnly take his seat. Reed participated in none of the decisions handed down yesterday.

Meanwhile, the court agreed to review an appeal by a large group of moving picture exhibitors and distributors enjoined by the Northern Texas Federal District Court from licensing practices allegedly violating the Sherman antitrust laws.

The Government complained they "engaged in a combination, conspiracy and agreement to restrain trade or commerce in motion picture films and to monopolize their exhibition in the States of Texas and New Mexico."

Appealing from the Texas court ruling were the Interstate Circuit, Inc.; the Texas Consolidated Theaters, Inc., of Dallas; Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell, president and general manager, respectively, of both corporations; and Paramount, Vitagraph, R-K-O, Columbia, United Artists, Universal Film Exchanges and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Other action by the court yesterday:

Ruled that Oregon may impose a State income tax on Government compensation received by the Guy F. Atkinson Co., of San Francisco, for work done under contract on Bonneville Dam.

Decided Dorothy Anderson was entitled to a retrial in her fight for reinstatement by Chester School Township of Wabash County, Ind., as a school teacher at Servia, Ind.

Asked further circuit court consideration of the appeal of Gertrude Kay, of New York, from conviction on charges of violating criminal provisions of the home owners loan act.

Justice Hugo L. Black, President Roosevelt's first appointee on the Supreme Court bench, piled up a record yesterday of three individual dissents from the rulings of the court.

In one opinion, Black asked the court to "overrule previous decisions which interpreted the fourteenth amendment to include corporations." For a half century the court has held corporations should be considered "persons" under the amendment's ban on depriving "any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law." Dissenting from the court's ruling that California cannot tax premiums received by the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. from other insurance firms doing business in California, Black said corporations are not entitled to fourteenth amendment protection.

Board's Power Explained.

Black differed with his colleagues in two other cases. In the Indiana school teacher case, Black said the majority opinion "unconstitutionally limits the right of Indiana to control Indiana's school system." He also took issue with a majority ruling that the Government has infringed on patents held by a French inventor on airplane "joysticks."

In holding the National Labor Relations Board has the constitutional right to conclude hearings without interference from the courts, Justice Brandeis also clearly outlined the limitations on Labor Board powers.

"No power to enforce an order is conferred upon the board," ruled Brandeis. "To secure enforcement, the board must apply to a circuit court of appeals for its affirmance. And until the board's order has been affirmed by the appropriate circuit court of appeals, no penalty accrues for disobeying it.

"The independent right to apply to a circuit court of appeals to have an order set aside is conferred upon any party aggrieved by the proceeding before the board. The board is even without power to enforce obedience to its subpena to testify or to produce written evidence. To enforce obedience it must apply to a district court, and to such application appropriate defense may be made."

Burke Wants Inquiry.

But Brandeis said he saw "no reason why the board should be prevented from exercising the exclusive initial jurisdiction conferred upon it by Congress," and ruled the courts are without power to enjoin the board from holding hearings.

Meanwhile, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, is seeking a Senate investigation of alleged partiality shown by the board in Wagner labor act proceedings. J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, will answer Burke's charges at a Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing Thursday.

Felt Like a Guilty Mata Hari

Refused admission to Canada, then not allowed to re-enter the United States, Gina Cigna, Metropolitan soprano, finally departed from New York last night for a recital at Toronto. She was detained Saturday when she attempted to enter Canada by way of Windsor because of a visa technicality. Then Canadian authorities refused to permit her to re-enter the U. S. until she convinced them she had enough money to keep from being a public charge. She said she felt a "little like a guilty Mata Hari" after she returned to New York, where she got special permission to keep her engagement.

Praises Pastors.

"Things have been going on in other countries—things which are not spiritual in any sense of the word—and that is putting it mildly."

With the declaration that "I did not really, deep down in my heart, believe very much in church missions in other lands," President Roosevelt confessed that "today I do." He added that "I have seen what the American church missions have accomplished in many countries, not only on the religious side, but on the side of health and of education."

President Roosevelt told his audience that "you have beeen rendering a great service to your Government."

"We still have a long way to go," he said, "and we have, whether we like it or not, to think about the average man, woman and child in the United States. We are doing just that, and they appreciate it.

"That is one reason why the churches are stronger today than they were four years ago. If we can continue to make the same progress in the next several years as we have in the past, we can feel we have been good and faithful servants."

Return to God Sought.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation and president of the association, assured the President that "we pastors, although holding many different political opinions, wish to pay our respects to you as our fellow-churchman as well as Chief Executive."

"We desire to pledge through you," he said, "our thought, our prayer, our useful service to our country in these difficult days."

Earlier in the day, the ministers, meeting in the Department of Commerce auditorium, adopted a resolution instructing Dr. Blackwelder to appoint a committee of 21 to confer with Secretary Roper "and other leading men in American life" in an effort to rouse the Nation to "a return to God."

The committee was also requested to ask other religious bodies to join "in this endeavor to awaken America to the prime importance of restoring moral and spiritual values to their rightful place in the lives of all patriotic citizens."

Speaking on "The Church and Human Security," Secretary Roper stressed the need for the revival of those "Christian virtues" that undergird the Nation's institutions. He said the churches should assume a larger shore in the burden of caring for human need.

Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, of Christ Methodist Church, New York City, delivered an address on "From Propaganda to Prophecy."

Railroads Present Their Arguments For Higher Rates

By the Associated Press.

Railroad men, appearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday, pleaded for increased freight and passenger rates.

By increasing freight rates 15 per cent throughout the country and passenger rates a half cent a mile in Eastern territory, the railroads hope to increase yearly revenue by $467,000,000.

J. M. Souby, assistant general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, said the carriers couldn't continue operations without the increases.

Boy, Divorce Pawn, In Third Runaway

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—An unhappy 12-year-old boy's love for his father defied again today a court edict that he must live with his mother.

For the third time in 10 days, curly-haired, serious-faced Howard Frankel ran away because of the squabble over his custody.

He disappeared from public school 98 in Brooklyn, only four days after his last flight from his mother, Mrs. Rose Frankel, to whom he was turned over by the New Jersey Chancey Court. Police tonight were watching the father's house.

After a protracted custody battle, the judge held two weeks ago that the father, Julius Frankel, Linden, N. J., merchant, had "poisoned" Howard's mind against his mother.

Danger of War Worst Since '18, Leahy Asserts

Naval

Military Affairs Committee, with several committee members, visited the War Department, where he discussed additional airplanes and enlisted reserves, and predicted House passage in three weeks of a bill limiting war-time profits.

Johnson's brief, pungent address attracted wide attention. It followed demands by House Democrats last week, led by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, for an explanation of American foreign policy before approval was voted of the President's naval increase. Johnson said:

"I believe in a great Navy, but I believe the Senate is entitled to know what is the foreign policy of the United States . . . I want no peripatetic ambassador running around Europe, saying over there to various chancellories whatever may be in his head.

"I want no man secretly and silently at this time, when all of the peoples of the world are on edge and jittery—I want no one man to have the right in secrecy to deal with the destiny of my country.

"I should like to know, sir, today, tomorrow, the next day, if it be possible, what the foreign policy of the United States is. I do not know it. Other Senators do not know it. No one knows it."

Admiral Leahy, in discussing the consequences of attempted invasion of this country in wartime, said:

"We cannot assume an attitude of passive defense and simply beat off an attack at one place and later at another.

"In such a case we would see our coasts blockaded, our outlying possessions seized, our commerce, both coastwise and foreign, driven off the seas, and we would undergo the costly experience of finding the war lasting just as long as the enemy willed it . . . The only way that war, once begun, can be brought to a successful conclusion is by making the enemy want to stop fighting—by injuring him so badly he is ready to quit.

"Prompt and effective injury to an enemy, at a distance from our shores, is the only correct strategy to be employed."

He named the outlying possessions of the United States—Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, Guam, Samoa, Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and temporarily the Philippine Islands, as all "more or less vulnerable."

Defense of these possessions rests largely on maintenance of an adequate Navy, he said, and then stressed that a navy "cannot be created upon the outbreak of war" and "cannot be increased to adequate strength in a short time."

In tracing the history of recent naval treaties, Leahy said that in his opinion the 5-5-3 ratio of international navies, providing sufficient naval strength for adequate defense against attack and insufficient strength to carry an attack to other shores, had been an admirable safety precaution, and added:

"If the treaties had been adhered to there would now be no occasion for increases in the navies."

Delay in commencement of an extensive naval building program, he said, would, in a short time, mean insufficient American security against attacks from overseas. He termed the requested increase "moderate" and continued:

"There is nothing in this program that would permit of aggressive action, of policing the world, or of projecting an attack against the territory of any other naval powers.

"It would require at least three times the proposed increase to prepare for aggressive action overseas with any reasonable prospect of success.

Democrat Rift Perils Housing Bill in Senate

Housing

Wagner), should now be accused of bad faith," Borah added. "It is unfair to accuse him of 'sabotage.'"

Minton said he was not attacking other members of the Senate, but he thought Lodge was "trying to do a neat job."

Senator Barkley and Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, explained to the Senate why the Federal Housing Administration is convinced the prevailing wage amendment would nullify the program.

Southerners Join Fight.

They said bankers would be unwilling to lend money on housing program projects if the wage amendment is included. They declared insurance on a loan would be canceled if a builder failed to pay prevailing wages and that lenders would "not take the risk."

Wheeler insisted an amendment could be "worked out" that assured prevailing wages without endangering the program.

Several Southern Senators unexpectedly joined the fight for the wage amendment, as the anti-lynching bill, held up more than three weeks by a Southern filibuster, was temporarily laid aside for the housing report.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, leading anti-lynching bill foe, accused Senator Wagner (housing bill coauthor), of voting for the prevailing wage provision in the Senate and against it, by proxy, in conference.

Connally, Wagner Tangle.

Senator Kenneth E. McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Senator Richard B. Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, warned they would vote against the conference report unless the wage amendment was included.

Wagner insisted the wage amendment would hurt rather than help labor and restrict labor unions in colletcive bargaining efforts. The New Yorker declared "unionism and free action" would be destroyed if the Government ever attempts to fix all wages "and we shall be right in fascism. That's what fascism is."

The New York Senator said workers would be better off with a higher annual wage, even if hourly wages were lower.

"We ought to permit labor organizations to work that out without interference," Wagner said. "Wherever labor is organized, you needn't worry. They can take care of themselves."

Connally said that if what Wagner said was true, "there wasn't any need of passing the Wagner labor relations act." The Texan and the New Yorker tangled verbally again as Wagner accused Connally of "deliberately misquoting me."

Recess Prevented Rout.

Lodge, whose amendment precipitated the row, denied he wished to "sabotage" the housing bill, but admitted he was opposed to the program. "A building boom does not cause a business boom, it follows it," he insisted. The Massachusetts Republican quoted President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in support of his amendment. He read a telegram from Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, favoring the amendment.

Majority Leader Barkley repeatedly jumped into the fray, attempting to turn Democratic fire away from the housing conference report. But as a vote on the report approached, he moved for a recess of the Senate.

Prevailing wage advocates charged later the recess was taken "to prevent defeat of the report."

Barkley only laughed.

a departmental matter. After these duties had been performed he offered to drive me to my home. When we left the department we decided to take a short drive out the Mount Vernon highway.

"On the way back I asked Mr. Hardy to stop at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria for a few minutes. He stopped his car on the street beside the hotel, walked to the door with me and returned to his car. I went to the dressing room, which is on the mezzanine floor of the hotel.

"A few minutes later Mr. Hardy met me in the lobby. He told me that he had been held up and shot. I wanted to go with him to the hospital, but he became quite distressed and insisted that I return to my home. He pointed out that I had been inside the hotel when the shooting occurred, that I could testify to nothing that had taken place, and could do nothing to assist him. Under the stress of the excitement and pressure of his insistence I reluctantly agreed to leave.

"I was not present when the shooting occurred and know nothing about it except what I have heard and read. I did not even hear the shot fired.

"Mr. Hardy is much too ill to be consulted about this statement so I am taking the responsibility of revealing facts which there is no reason to conceal."

Mrs. Buchanan, a native of Maine, was graduated from National University Law School with an L.L. B. degree in June, 1936. Previously, she had attended Smith College and the George Washington University. She lives at 2900 Connecticut avenue, and has been in the antitrust division of the Department of Justice for several years.

Hardy, who has been assigned to the antitrust division of the Justice Department, lives at 6 Monroe avenue, University Park, Md. He is married and has three children.

His personal physician, Dr. Milton H. Prosperi, stated last night that Hardy is "getting along very well and should be out of the hospital within two weeks." No visitors except his immediate family were allowed to see Hardy yesterday at Sibley Hospital.

Hardy is under $500 bond as a material witness.

Alexandria police said that Clarence Kennedy, Alexandria undertaker held for questioning, was completely innocent of any knowledge of the shooting. Cain Jackson, colored man who had pointed out Kennedy as a suspect, yesterday asserted he had been mistaken in his identification.

Barcelona, Jan. 31 (AP).—Weary rescue workers estimated tonight two destructive insurgent air raids yesterday had killed 400 persons. They continued to remove hundreds of dead and maimed from the shattered remains of bombed buildings.

The government announced it had suspended the scheduled reopening of the Spanish Cortes (parliament) in this temporary capital to prevent further bombings of civilians.

House Votes $5,000 Inquiry On Dispensing of D. C. Relief

District

toration, but had refused to allow any increase in personnel.

"Washington has more policemen in proportion to population than any other city in the country," Collins declared.

Dirksen argued that many of them, however, are continually delegated to act as guards at embassies or private receptions and to act as escorts for distinguished visitors to the National Capital.

The debate opened with an energetic fight by Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, in behalf of a larger Federal contribution.

Arguing that the Federal Government at least should reimburse the District for the loss of taxes resulting from the Federal Triangle development, Palmisano moved that the lump sum payment be increased from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000.

Among the members who spoke against the amendment was Representative Nichols, who is in charge of the new District tax bill. He reminded the House that the Jacobs committee on fiscal relations had recommended a Federal payment of only about $2,500,000.

On a voice vote, the amendment drew only two or three "ayes" and a roar of "noes."

A provision in the bill which places all custodial services of the District, including the janitors, firemen and watchmen in the public schools and court buildings under direction of the Commissioners drew fire from two members of the House.

A point of order raised against the provision by Representative Harlan (Democrat), of Ohio, was overruled, however.

Harlan and Representative Nichols charged Collins with trickery by inserting a proviso in the 1938 District bill while it was in conference after it had been ruled out in both the House and the Senate on points of order.

Subsequently, the General Accounting Office has ruled that the transfer in jurisdiction is permanent law.

Collins retorted that the engineers in charge of school heating plants had ruined boilers and were wasting fuel.

Legislative provisions which were stricken out on points of order were:

Proviso that the people's counsel, when and if appointed, be furnished a secretary at $1,620 and expert services to the extent of $5,000.

A limitation on newspaper advertising of school notices to Washington newspapers.

A proviso which would make all land purchases subject to approval by the District Commissioners. This was aimed especially at park tract purchases which are made by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission with District funds.

Although a point of order against a $60,000 item to prepare plans for a new main library was sustained, Collins succeeded in putting through an amendment which made the appropriation for a new "branch" library at the same location.

Vainly did Nichols argue that the House District Committee has not passed on the Collins bill authorizing a new $2,500,000 main library and that the change in language was merely a "subterfuge."

The sub-committee accepted without objection an amendment offered by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, to appropriate $5,000 for the employment of expert aid to draft a reorganization bill for the District government.

While Kennedy did not explain the purpose, it is understood the money would be used to employ an independent agency or person to draft a reorganization measure.

Although the reading clerk did not reach the public welfare provisions in the bill, the House became embroiled in an argument over the needs and administration that foreshadowed an even more intensive fight today, when amendments to increase the appropriation will be offered.

Collins, besides asserting that the total appropriation for relief in the 1939 bill is the same as carried in last year's act, argued that the number of cases on relief has dropped since last summer.

"This appropriation could be reduced," he said, "and everybody could still be served well."

He disclosed that he had conferred earlier in the day with Otto Cass, deputy director of the District WPA, and had found that there had been a sharp falling off in applications for work relief in recent months.

"Out of 563 cases certified in December by the District WPA," Collins said, "52 were held ineligible, 400 were given jobs and only 111 are out of work. And these were employables."

Asserting that the Public Assistance Divisions pays $83.50 to a family of two parents and three children, Collins said the prevailing WPA wage is only $45.

"Naturally, then these people would rather go on relief than get on the WPA rolls," he added.

"Washington is a bottleneck for the unemployed that come up from the South on their way North. They come here because they can get three times as much on relief than they can by staying at home and working."

Collins charged that the welfare department has been guilty of deception in estimating $30 for each old age pensioner when officials testified they intended to pay out only $25 a month.

"They expected to collect $15 a month from the Federal Government by this deception," he said.

Earlier Collins defended the reductions in the appropriations for schools by asserting that funds had been allowed for new teachers for every classroom that will be opened in the fiscal year.

The District now has a teacher for every 22 pupils on an average, he said, whereas "it is generally recognized in the educational world that a teacher for every 40 pupils is adequate."

French to Ask Immediate Rise In Navy Plans

Cabinet Will Get Revised Program to Re-establish 'Threatened Position.'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 31.—The navy minister disclosed today that France's new naval building program was being enlarged as a result of the rapidly growing world armament race.

William Bertrand, minister of the navy, said he would place the new program before the cabinet at the earliest opportunity and recommend its approval.

"As soon as a decision is taken and the necessary appropriations voted," he declared, "we are in a position to swing immediately into action to re-establish our threatened naval position."

The present program, calling for [illegible] tons of new fighting ships to cost [illegible],000,000 francs ($144,000,000) was described by the navy minister as risking "irremediable decadence" for France's maritime and colonial interests.

"The plans established during [illegible] be revised," he said. "The principle of wisdom and moderation which we gave in our 1938 naval budget found no echo in the world."

He said that he could not give details of the new program, but that plans called for immediate replacement of "certain over-age ships." France has six over-age battleships, while most of the lighter units of the fleet are of comparatively recent construction.

The Chamber of Deputies naval committee recently urged early construction of two 42,000-ton battleships, superclass Italy's two 35,000-ton units to be started soon. Reports that Japan was building ships greater than 40,000 tons also worried the naval committee.

Most of the deputies declare, however, that the country's finances cannot stand the extra strain.

Anglo-French Air Parley.

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—Viscount Swinton, British air minister, conferred at length today with French air experts on speeding up aircraft construction through Anglo-French co-operation.

The meeting was given significance by reports that Germany was maintaining a 10 per cent greater rate of air-force expansion than Great Britain. The British strength has been doubled in two years.

According to ministry figures Britain now has 2,031 first-line aircraft, compared to 1,015 in May, 1935, when the huge air rearmament program started.

Claire Dodd, blonde film actress, announced just before boarding a plane to New York she was going to divorce her husband, J. Milton Strauss, Hollywood investment broker, after six years of married life. Her "new heart throb," she said, is going to sail for Europe Wednesday and she wants to say good-by to him. She said only that he is a "wealthy New York businessman."

7¾-Lb. Girl Born to Juliana; Dutch People Wild With Joy

By the Associated Press.

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Jan. 31.—Crown Princess Juliana gave birth today to a blue-eyed, fair-haired daughter who some day may succeed her as queen of the little country and its vast colonial empire.

The 7¾-pound girl, princess of The Netherlands, Princess of Orange-Nassau, Duchess of Mecklenburg, Princess of Lippe-Biesterfeld, was the first heir born to the House of Orange since Juliana herself 28 years ago.

For months the pious Dutch had prayed with Prince Bernhard, Juliana's consort, that the child would be a prince and future king. The last King of Holland, Willem III, was born in 1817.

But Juliana wanted a girl and at 9:47 a. m. her wish was granted at the little white palace of Soestdijk, her country home near here.

A salute of 51 guns boomed out at Amsterdam, The Hague, Arnheim, Breda and Amersfoort garrisons.

In Amsterdam, crowds had collected on the historic Dam Square in expectation of the announcement. As the news came, thousands chanted the solemn national anthem of ancient Holland and its royal house, "Wilhelmus van Nassauwen."

After the first moments of reverence, The Netherlands went wild with joy. Its quaint winding lanes and old cobbled streets were filled with whirling couples, dancing under massed banners of Orange.

Small Nations Ask League to End Sanctions

Compulsory Embargo Held Futile and Dangerous at Council Session.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Jan. 31—Representatives of small nations today called upon the League of Nations to abandon its system of obligatory sanctions—the economic weapon by which members originally had hoped to curb warring powers and enforce collective security.

The long-expected attack on sanctions, embodied in Article XVI of the League Covenant, was led by delegates from Switzerland, Sweden and The Netherlands.

They urged the committee on Covenant revision to recognize officially that the League should not and could not longer wield such punitive power.

The controversial section of the Covenant reads:

"Should any member of the League resort to war . . . it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the Covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of al lfinancial, commercial or perconal intercourse between the nationals of the Covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the League or not."

The section has been invoked only once, in the unsuccessful effort to halt Italy's invasion of Ethiopia in 1935.

With three major powers, Germany, Japan and Italy, now out of the League, opinion has been growing that future invocation of sanctions would be not only ineffective, but dangerous.

The text of a disputed resolution inviting League members to aid China individually in her war against Japan was agreed upon finally by delegates of Britain, France, Russia and China.

It read, in part, the Council has "drawn the most serious attention of members of the League to the feasibility" of giving aid to China as provided for in the Assembly's resolution of October 6—denouncing Japan.

It was understood the resolution would be introduced soon at a public session of the Council.

Japanese Flee, 1,000 Are Slain, Chinese Assert

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Feb. 1.—Chinese forces, throwing all available reinforcements into their attack, today smashed at the spearhead of the Japanese advance near Mingkwang, slaughtering more than 1,000 Japanese, according to Chinese reports.

The battle was reported to be the bloodiest since the fall of Shanghai, with slaughter on both sides already running into thousands. Observers believe the fate of Mingkwang may be the turning point in the Japanese inland campaign south of the Yellow River.

Acting on orders of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to hold the line below the Yellow River "at all costs," the Chinese hurled themselves with fixed bayonets at Japanese lines west of Mingkwang.

Chinese reports asserted the Japanese were falling back toward the walled city of Mingkwang—70 miles north of Nanking and 105 miles South of Suchow—after ten bloody bayonet charges broke their line and forced them to retreat, leaving hundreds of dead on the battlefield.

Japanese reports said the Chinese also lost 1,000 men. Chinese admitted their losses were heavy but asserted the Japanese were preparing to evacuate Mingkwang. It was rumored the Chinese actually had retaken this city, but official confirmation was lacking.

Thousands have been slain on both sides since the huge-scale battle began last week. Chinese rushed heavy reinforcements to the northern front after Chiang Kai-shek ordered the defense line along the east-west Lunghai railroad to be held.

Bodies Washed Ashore; Fear British Ship Sank

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—The discovery today of five bodies washed up on Hoy, one of the Orkney Islands, together with a piece of wreckage from the Grimsby trawler Leicestershire, led to the belief the vessel and her crew of 15 had been lost in Saturday's severe storm. The trawler was last reported Friday near desolate Sule Skerry Island, off the northern coast of Scotland.

Eden Will Try To 'Humanize' War in Spain

Favors Lone Appeal by Britain to Cease Bombing Towns.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 31.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, shocked by the repeated bombardment of civilians in Spain, was reported today to be determined to make another effort to "humanize" the Spanish civil war.

Informed sources said Eden was considering what further steps could be taken to follow up the London nonintervention committee's appeal to both the Spanish government and insurgent forces to stop bombing towns behind the battle lines and mass executions.

The British foreign secretary's action came close after the "bloody Sunday" raid by insurgent war planes on Barcelona, latest of more than a score in which at least 1,000 persons were killed and 1,500 wounded during January.

Eden was said to favor a lone hand by Britain in appealing to the warring Spaniards, rather than by a group of powers through the slow-moving nonintervention committee.

The position of the foreign secretary was said in informed quarters to reflect Britain's "humanitarian sentiments" which have been upset by the latest "wanton and indiscriminate bombing" in Spain.

Another Princess.

The unfeigned joy and enthusiasm manifested by the people of The Netherlands over the birth of a daughter to Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard is a striking indication of the popularity of the royal pair. In a real sense, too, this manifestation of public opinion constitutes a tribute to Queen Wilhelmina.

Holland has had no king since 1890, when Willem III died. But in the 48 years that have elapsed since then the throne has been occupied to every citizen's satisfaction by Queen Wilhelmina. She has performed her royal task so well that the Hollanders, anything but an effeminate people, are not in the least perturbed by the prospect that, following the present reign, they will again be under a queen, with the same possibility now open for the reign after that.

In due course the princess born yesterday should have some sturdy brothers. But, if nature ordains otherwise, it will be quite all right with the Hollanders, provided the newcomer develops the qualities which have so endeared her grandmother and her mother to their people.

The Oliver Twist Act.

Two years ago veterans of the World War received a bonus amounting in the aggregate to approximately $2,000,000,000. But even this large-scale and wholly unwarranted raid on the Treasury has apparently failed to satisfy the veterans' lobbies. Like Oliver Twist, they are now back for more and hungrier than ever. This time the special privilege they seek is in the form of pensions for widows and dependents of those who saw service during the World War, regardless of the cause of their death.

Appearing before a House committee last week, representatives of three veterans' organizations voiced the demand for monthly payments to widows and orphans of former soldiers. The more modest asked for a minimum of $22 a month, with an additional stipend for all dependents. But one spokesman insisted on a minimum monthly payment of $60.

The groups pressing these claims do not by any means represent all veterans and probably not more than a relatively small percentage of those who wore the uniform. Nevertheless, they insist that veterans and their families should be treated as a class apart. During recent years very real steps have been taken to build up a system of social security to take care of the needs of the aged, the dependent and the unemployed. This system rests on the broad basis of the entire population. When veterans attempt to reach beyond these benefits and dip into the Treasury in behalf of a particular class, their pleas should be flatly rejected.

"Dangerously Acute."

There can be no disagreement with Senator Wheeler's statement "that the situation of the American railroads has become dangerously acute." It is encouraging to note that the chairman of the Senate's Committee on Interstate Commerce is strongly of that opinion. When the carriers' appeal for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates has been heard, the ICC will doubtless draw the practical conclusion by granting this emergency request.

Unlike many of the rail managements, however, Senator Wheeler seems to have little hope that higher freight rates can save the roads from bankruptcy. He indicates that a comprehensive legislative program is necessary. The elimination of "duplicate facilities and services of all kinds which are now required because of the wasteful competitive scramble for traffic now forced on our roads" would, of course, be helpful in the long run. But some other proposals which the Senator appears to have in mind raise doubts as to the practicability of his tentative program.

Talk of rescuing the railroads from their plight has been heard in Congress for many years. Their condition has continued to grow worse and no relief has been forthcoming. The merits of Senator Wheeler's proposed "drastic and large-scale legislation" can be adequately considered only when it has been fully outlined. But the present emergency certainly will not be met by any such program.

Entirely aside from the need and desirability of basic reforms, the railroads are now desperately in need of more revenue. Whether or not it proves to be a solution the increase in freight rates by the ICC is the step immediately indicated.

Franco's Answer.

The reconvening at Barcelona of the Spanish Cortes has occasioned a striking demonstration of friendship for the struggling Spanish republic by sympathetic members of other national parliaments. It is reported that the meeting will be attended by delegations from the British House of Commons, the French Chamber and Senate, the Parliaments of Norway, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, and other European democracies. In addition, no fewer than 26 members of the United States Senate and 34 members of the House have addressed a note of fraternity and good wishes to the Cortes.

All this is unquestionably a tribute to the Spanish government, not merely for having so far successfully resisted the attempt to overthrow the republic by military force, but perhaps even more for controlling the communistic elements within its own camp. Between a Fascist Spain on the one hand and one dominated by Moscow on the other those interested in parliamentary institutions see little or nothing to choose. But the reconvening of the elected Spanish Parliament, for the fifth time since the outbreak of the civil war, indicates the tenacity with which the hard-pressed government clings to democratic procedure.

Gen. Franco has countered this sign of strength at Barcelona by unleashing air bombings of unprecedented destructive force against the civilians of that and other loyalist cities. He has, furthermore, refused to give any consideration to proposals for a truce to this appalling form of warfare, so far as cities behind the battle lines are concerned.

This terrorism is unlikely to strengthen the rebel cause. It goes far to cancel out the anti-clerical outrages perpetrated by adherents of the government. It further reduces to a shambles the economic centers of the country for whose salvation the rebels claim to fight. And, from the military viewpoint, it seems a confession that for all their foreign aid the Fascist troops are unable to make gains against the reorganized and obviously increasingly efficient loyalist army.

The corpses of the helpless women and children slain by air raids in Barcelona are not an asset to Franco's cause. He does not know the character of his own people if he deems that he strengthens his claim to govern Spain by ordering warfare of that character. And he does not understand the vitality of democratic institutions if he really believes that they can be blasted out of existence by bombs, no matter how ruthlessly hurled from safe altitudes.

Responsible Public Carriers.

Two streetcars collided over the weekend and several passengers were hurt. If their injuries prove serious and liability is demonstrated, it will be found that the traction company is a financially responsible concern. The law, of course, compels this. As a result, last year the Capital Transit Co. set aside more than $500,000 to protect its patrons in case of accident.

Taxicab patrons in Washington have no such protection. The city is one of the few in the country which does not require taxis to carry liability insurance. The law here goes no further than to revoke the licenses of drivers who fail to pay damages assessed by court action. Capital taxis, which are estimated to collect $6,000,000 of the city's annual transportation fares, therefore have a distinct advantage over the streetcars, which do $10,000,000 of the business. The resulting low cab fares are pleasant enough. But study of accident statistics reveals the undesirability of such cheapness. Last year, taxis killed proportionately more people than the streetcars.

A bill to force liability insurance on taxi owners passed the House last summer. In the Senate, it has been favorably reported after amendment. Instead of merely permitting a taxi fleet to establish an accident reserve, the District Committee in the upper chamber would put private drivers and corporations in the same category, compelling full insurance for every cab. Moreover, certain Senators demand a gradual limitation of the number of cabs in the District.

These slight differences should be easily ironed out—and quickly. Common sense demands it; the public demands it; and—to judge by spokesmen heard at a meeting last week—many of the taxi drivers themselves desire it.

Bank Failures In 1937.

During the last six months of 1937 thirty-eight insured banks failed, necessitating payments of nearly $4,300,000 to depositors. This sum, together with other expenses for the period, exceeded interest returns on the investments of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Hence, for the first time since its organization the FDIC was compelled to dip into its reserves, built up by assessments upon the banks.

While the amount withdrawn is negligible compared with the size of the reserve fund, it is nevertheless a reminder that insurance reserves would afford very inadequate protection to depositors if any large number of sizable banks were to fail simultaneously.

Chairman Crowley is well aware of this fact and has constantly emphasized the importance of building up the capital structure of weak banks and forcing insured institutions to abandon unsound practices. Preventive action to avert bank failures becomes all the more incumbent upon Federal authorities when private citizens, no longer fearful of losing their money, become relatively indifferent to the methods employed by bank managements.

By preventing panic "runs" due to unwarranted fears, deposit insurance serves a constructive purpose in reducing the number of bank failures. But obviously it cannot avert failures due to the inherent weaknesses of the present banking system. The poor record of the last six months emphasizes the folly of continuing to rely indefinitely upon panaceas such as deposit insurance in place of much needed and long overdue basic reform of our banking system.

Logical Sequel.

Favorable response to Representative Palmisano's appeal for an increase in the Federal payment to the District had not been anticipated. By pointing out that only 45 per cent of the city's area is now taxable, the chairman of the House District Committee made a strong argument for a more adequate division of responsibility for the Capital's expenses. But he offered no plan by which a fair adjustment could be made.

The lack of such a plan has always placed the District under a handicap. It is obvious that as the Government continues to take over more land here the tax-contributing area will become smaller while the city's expenses increase. But until some obviously reasonable means of determining the Federal Government's responsibility to the Capital City is devised, it will be extremely difficult to secure an increase in the $5,000,000 allowance.

In voting funds for an investigation of relief here, and for the drafting of a District reorganization bill, the House in some respects recognized objectives which the people of the District are pursuing. If the relief inquiry is completed in time for Congress to rectify its grave mistake of cutting off all aid to the employable unemployed here, it will serve a very useful purpose. Before a reorganization bill is drafted, of course, the community and Congress will have to decide on the changes to be made. In both cases, however, these concessions to the District viewpoint suggest that the House is eager to examine needs of the local community.

If the District Committee would unanimously present a plan for annual adjustment of the Federal payment to Washington, therefore, it would probably bring a very different response to that accorded Mr. Palmisano's casual appeal for a larger "lump sum." Certainly a technical problem of this sort could be more satisfactorily worked out by representatives of the Treasury, and the District, with the aid of a neutral third party, than through open debate in the House.

The logical sequel to Mr. Palmisano's effort would be a bill setting up such a fiscal relations committee for permanent service.

An Automatic Census.

In order to qualify for receipt of benefits under State unemployment insurance systems, workers must register at offices of the United States Employment Service. The effect of this link between employment exchanges and the insured unemployed has been reflected in a sudden increase in registrations during December.

Nearly 900,000 applications for work were received in that month, of which approximately half represented applications from persons registering for the first time. This increase in new applications for the entire country represented a gain of over 50 per cent as compared with November. In States ready to pay unemployment benefits, the increase amounted to nearly 77 per cent.

It is evident, therefore, that as the unemployment insurance system comes into full operation throughout the country, the United States Employment Service will have comprehensive, up-to-date, and reliable statistics relating to the volume of unemployment in insured industries. Although registration is voluntary, failure to register is penalized by loss of benefits.

That fact insures a virtually 100 per cent coverage of the unemployed who are eligible for benefits. Of course with the insurance system getting under way at a time when unemployment is chronic and widespread, a large percentage of the employable unemployed, unable to qualify for benefits, may not register. But in course of time they, too, will acquire an eligible status and thereafter if they lose their jobs will appear on the registration lists.

As often stated in these columns, the United States Employment Service is the only agency equipped to supply the kind of information about employment conditions that has more than academic or historical value. In time it will provide a record of those able and willing to work, that will be virtually complete for the insured industries and increasingly satisfactory for other industries, as workers realize the advantages of registering at public employment offices. That time would have been advanced if the money wasted on a useless unemployment census had been allocated to improving the facilities of the employment service.

The President On Arms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a sense it is most regrettable, as the President admits, that owing to conditions beyond his control, he felt in duty bound to address the Congress on the subject of armaments in his message of January 28.

Does this mean a departure from the traditional American policy with regard to our armed forces? Does it also mean a different international point of view on the limitation of arms? Answering the first question, all fair-minded citizens must agree that the tone of the message is exceedingly sober and far from militaristic. The second was answered by Mr. Roosevelt, as follows: "It is our clear duty to further every effort toward peace but at the same time to protect the Nation."

Nevertheless, the President's recommendations will undoubtedly be seized upon by insincere nations to justify their own designs; however, he is right. While his aims will not deter the present policy of any particular country where an armament race is in progress, it is hoped "any potential enemy" will give heed to the fact that, although we will continue energetically to strive for peace, we cannot afford to run the risk of neglecting to prepare for any emergency which might arise in the future.

In closing these remarks let not our various peace societies be deceived. Their censure of the President's recommendations is possible, but if these laudable bodies were our only safeguard against foreign aggression, America would some day find herself in the same position as poor, peace-loving China.

An Anti-Japanese Boycott.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The protest of the silk stocking workers against an anti-Japanese boycott is like the man who would not have a bad appendix removed because it "hurt and cost too much."

The boycott of Japanese goods should extend further than silk hose. This country is flooded with cheap merchandise from that country. One can scarcely buy a bill of dry goods anywhere, such as china, hooked rugs, table linens, etc., without finding upon their delivery an inconspicuous little sticker reading: "Made in Japan." Since Japanese labor costs but a few cents a day, if this is persisted in it cannot fail to undermine many industries of this country.

Crime Prevention Bureau?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post recently has carried interesting accounts of the proceedings of the local conference on crime conditions in the District. Among the events reported was a forceful address by Attorney General Cummings in which he called attention to some of the fundamental factors and difficulties underlying criminal behavior.

This raises the question: Why has not the Department of Justice taken the lead, or at least participated actively, in crime prevention programs? Is there any good reason why there should not be established in the Department of Justice a Bureau of Crime Prevention co-ordinate with the justly famed Bureau of Investigation?

The work of such a bureau would have to be mainly of a research and advisory character for the first few years. However, surely no one will contend that it would be a waste of money or talent for the Federal Government to prepare itself for active and intelligent co-operation with State and local governments in this most pressing problem by undertaking to provide a permanent staff of trained experts.

Moreover, there is an area in which the Federal Government has direct, first-hand responsibility. I refer not only to such geographical regions as the District of Columbia and certain of our insular possessions which are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government, but also to the fact that there is a Federal prison system, parole system, and a system of Federal criminal courts with certain rules of procedure, evidence, etc. In all of these matters, a Federal Bureau of Crime Prevention could make careful and continuous studies, recommend changes and new experiments that seemed desirable, and actively participate in the administration of the Federal system of criminal justice.

The Department of Justice should be encouraged to take an active and systematic part in the all-important work of crime prevention.

The Able Jobless.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What the papers say about the plight of the unemployed employables is only too true. I have been helping one man who was cut off from work before Christmas. Several times I have advertised for work for this man, naming several different things which he could do, and used my own phone over which to receive calls, and I know personally that he has gotten nothing from them.

He tramps around hunting jobs. Last week he earned $1.85 and paid out $1.25 for a pass. If I had not helped him with food and some money I don't know what he would have done. And he is just one out of the 37,000 employables who can't get work. What are the other 36,999 people going to do if they do not have someone on whom they can depend in their time of dire need?

Why are the people of Washington so shocked at the rise in petty crime? Just what would they do if they had no job and could not get one, had no money, no food, a landlord nagging for his rent and threatening to turn them out on the street, a wife and children starving and perhaps sick?

According to statistics, there are six such families to each 100 people who are employed. If each 100 employed people can't take care of six families, it is too bad. If these starving people lived in Russia, China or India there would be great activity to get money, and grain, etc., to send to them. But because they live in our own city nothing is done for them.

Eyewitness Corroboration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No longer can I sit idly by and permit "Missourian" and his fellow doubters to chide Shirley Povich for the "wildcat" episode in the biography of Clark Griffith.

"Missourian" doubts that Clark Griffith as a boy of 11, aided by a club and a dog, whipped a wildcat; or that any self-respecting Missouri boy would confuse a wildcat with a coon even at night in a tree top with the leaves obscuring the lad's vision.

I don't know what part of Missouri "Missourian" hails from, but I am certain that the Vernon County species of wildcat of 57 years ago was as incompatible a species as any that he knew. Had young Griffith, in his battle with the supposed "coon" known that the party of the second part was a wildcat, I am sure he would have been properly frightened. But under the cricumstances he was willing to give battle.

In defense of Mr. Povich, permit me to say that he was absolutely correct in his reporting of the episode. You see, I happen to be an eyewitness of that little affair which occurred 57 years ago.

Shoes First And Why.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the weekly picture mags features a series of shots on "what a champion prizefighter does the day of a fight." Among other things, he apparently does a lot of undressing—once while weighing in, once while napping in the afternoon, once while girding for the battle and presumably once more on going to bed.

The magazine's photographer showed commendable restraint and intruded on only two of these disrobings. In publishing the results, considerable stress is placed in the captions on the fact that the pugilist in question first removes his spats, then shoes, socks and finally shirt and trousers.

What the heck? I don't see anything camera-worthy in such procedure. To be frank, I always take off my shoes (don't go in for spats) first. The point is to avoid dragging dirty soles through my trouser legs. Then come my socks, probably because they're handiest. Then shirt and trousers. Who'd do it any other way?

Two Comments On Lady Astor's Visit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I learn from an Associated Press report of January 28 that Lady Nancy Astor, M. P., is being much lionized at the Capital. To my mere American mind, this lady who comes to us uninvited is guilty of arrogance and impertinence.

"You're spending money like drunken sailors," she said. "But it is madness for this country to continue piling up deficits. Great Britain has been increasing expenditures for social programs but has balanced the budget through heavier taxation."

It is refreshing to note that none of the Senators on Capitol Hill embarrassed the lady by reminding her that the heavier taxes were not extended to the point of raising money to pay Britain's honest war debts to the United States.

I discovered that at this moment there is in storage at the Virginia capitol, recently delivered, a portrait of Lady Astor, painted by an English artist, but paid for with American money raised by subscription in Virginia, waiting to be formally presented to the Commonwealth of Virginia and hung on the walls of the State capitol.

The Legislature has yet to accept it. But the fact that the Governor who has just stepped out of office headed the movement to thus glorify the alien noblewoman seems to assure the portrait place alongside heroic figures who may well turn over in their graves when this incredible affront is given to the whole citizenry of America.

H. WALT WILLIAMS.
Richmond, Va., Jan. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that Lady Astor remarks: "It's very tiresome to have Americans spittin' and chewin' and saying they're goin' to buy the island." Personally, I have never come in contact with an American of that particular description.

If it is our co-operation with England that the American-born member of the British Parliament is looking for, why not let her consider—as a well-known sportswoman—the fact that foul play is as ignoble among nations as it is among individuals on a race course? Why not take into account the fact that the British and French nations broke a treaty with America in failing to pay their war debts in the face of the debt of gratitude they both owed to America for having won their war for them? Let her consider the fact that this happened when America was in desperate need of financial help—and now the English and French have the nerve to talk about "co-operation!"

When we can meet these nations on a common ground of moral honesty we shall have a better chance of talking co-operation. It would be interesting to know whether, if the South American countries decided to make war upon the United States, the English and French nations would feel the same necessity for "co-operation" with us that they do at the present time.

By the way, is a person born in Virginia or in Boston considered an American, or exclusively a "Virginian" or a "Bostonian?"

The Post Impressionist

Where To, Pal?

TAXI drivers possess the new magic. The mariners of old were the titans of their time, but they were mere scientists—they used the stars, and then the compass. Lief Eriksson, de Gama, Columbus, Cabot, Magellan . . . they were heroes enough in a time when reckoning of one sort or another was sufficient. Cortez, Cabeza de Vaca, Lewis and Clark, Daniel Boone, Amundsen, Peery, Lindbergh, Dick Byrd, all resorted to mathematics, or knew the side of a tree that grows moss, or looked at the sun, or asked some Aztecs now and then. Their simple arts, which charted new oceans, brought new continents to light, and guided man to goals real or mythical, plotted or unsuspected, might not direct the user to a house across the street in a modern city.

The taxi driver's processes are invariably mysterious to the ordinary man. Even though a cliff dweller may have traveled a simple route all his life on foot or in a horse-drawn automobile, if he takes a cab to the same destination he will find himself whirled down an unfamiliar side street, through some inexplicable and henceforth undiscoverable short cut along the way. Yesterday my wife told me this tale. It was as if she were propounding a riddle.

"The driver stayed on F street all the way from Union Station to within four or five blocks of the East. Then he went around two sides of a block, and was on a street parallel to Fourteenth. He made one more turn, and he was on Pennsylvania avenue."

* * *

Perhaps you have lived in Washington all your life and you know that the story is absurdly possible. Or maybe you are sure it can't be done. The truth of it doesn't matter—the important part is the wonder with which it is related. At the moment of hearing, the symbolic status of the cabman dawned on me: He is the archtype of the era that has superseded the Age of Reason. He is the only creature completely oriented to a period which has abandoned not only the old philosophies and the old morals, but the old facts and the very laws of Nature as well. Man's life is in a state of flux; his calculations, such as he can make, are based on movable quantities instead of fixed rules; "dynamic" is his natural condition, but he is not sure what that is; his weather even, made by other men, varies from hot to cold between building and building and at no season can he predict it farther ahead than the other side of a revolving door.

"Which way does Fourteenth street go?" my wife asked—"East and West?"

I could not remember, and what was more, I could not see why it mattered. There is no east or west to a street, it simply goes somewhere . . . or nowhere. The points of the compass, without our realizing it, have lost their significance to the common man. When the radio beam has become universal, they no longer will mean anything even to the air pilot or the skipper.

At that moment all I could be sure of was that we were driving south on No. 1 highway. I knew where we had come from, and where we were going; and I remembered the curves in the road. But in a certain absolute sense, I was a badly lost boy. A great star glowed over the horizon to the right, and when I wondered what quarter of the sky it occupied, a strange thing happened:

I found myself standing in front of the big white country house where all my childhood was spent. Foursquare it stood, and each corner was a point to the compass. I turned my back on the blank stretch of the northern sky. Beyond the house, and across a pine forest, the remnants of sunshine was dying in the South. That way lay Richmond. On the left an opening in the woods gave on a mysterious reach of blue, the East, whence storms came. And on the right was the sunset, a flaming orange as I had often seen it. Here one might dream, here one might wonder about many things; but about certain things one need not wonder, so there was a great peace.

These points of the compass, which were the corners of the house, were far more than names; they were far more than directions. The East was the source of renewing, and of freshening; the East winds blew cool from the bay, many miles distant. In the East the moon was big and red before it dwindled up the sky; the East was gray and wore a ribbon of cerise at dawn. The sun also was big there, whether it came up like an orange in a clear bowl or like a fried egg on a smoky platter. The South gave us warmth that shone in the rear windows, and into the hen houses and the woodshed. That way, far off above the bushy treetops, was a white city with monuments along its wide avenues. The West, though, for all its glory, was a robber and a cheat. It chilled the sun and took it from us: it received the waning moon; and its clouds went thundering down the river while our corn crops rustled high and dry on the ridge. The North was the great hole in the sky, where few stars were. On pale evenings we might gather in the yard to see the pink flicker of the Aurora Borealis, cold, uncanny and dangerous. Somewhere in that direction set cities of untold wealth and untold filth and treachery, cities of bedlam, of such busy-ness that one child lost might scream his lungs out unanswered.

* * *

There, it is true, a lost child cries unanswered if he cries for a certainty that has vanished. There, and everywhere now, the bedlam will overshadow him—unless he is a taxi driver.

George Spelvin's Emma.

LAST SUMMER George Spelvin decided to get away from it all and therefore rented a little place in the country and moved up, taking along Emma, the colored woman who fluffs up the pillows and runs the vacuum and does the cooking in the Spelvins' love nest in town, to do the same up there. They had a good time, slept well to the music of the crickets, saw several rabbits and, they hope, a deer, although it might have been a neighbor's Great Dane, and returned to town fit for the fray, as Dale Carnegie might say.

PEGLER.

There had been no mishap to mar their enjoyment of the woods and fields except one almost forgotten incident last July when Emma, on her day off, went out to gather some wild flowers, slipped on a rock, grabbed a maple sapling to save herself from falling, and sprained her thumb. It hurt a little that night, so Mr. Spelvin carried her over to the doctor, who gave her a bag of pills which she was to take every hour on the hour. If not relieved she was to return for an X-ray. The thumb was no worse next day, but it was still sore, so Mr. Spelvin thought it would be a wise precaution to have the X-ray to see if it was broken. It wasn't broken, however—just sprained—and the bill was $5 for the pills and $8 for the X-ray, a total of $13, which he paid.

* * * *

NEITHER Emma nor the Spelvins gave it another thought until a short time before Thanksgiving, when Mr. Spelvin received a large and formidable official form from the State Industrial Commission and a letter calling him to time for failure to report an industrial accident on his place. The form had dozens of blanks to be filled in. What was the nature of the industry? Were there any unprotected saws, belts or lathes in his plant, what kind of explosives were used in his business, and was he properly licensed to use the same, if any? Was there any emergency hospital on his premises and was there a physician in constant or periodic attendance or on call, and was there a registered nurse on full time? On the day of the mishap to Emma he had failed to make proper notification to the Department of Labor, a neglect of which the commission was inclined to take a rather serious view, and would he see Section G, paragraph 4, sub-section (A), relating to penalties for failure to comply with the provisions of the workmen's compensation act? What was the cause of the accident on his premises? Structural defect? Mechanical breakdown? Explosion? Were all the injured given immediate first-aid? Had any lives been lost or limbs blown, torn or lopped off, and where had Mr. Spelvin buried his dead, if any?

Mr. Spelvin saw that there was a little misapprehension and, after consulting Emma, who had completely forgotten her sprained thumb, threw aside the form and wrote the commission a letter, stating, in effect, "Cook sprained thumb picking wild flowers on day off. No explosion, No fire. No dead."

Other forms arrived and Mr. Spelvin ignored them until a couple of weeks ago, when he received a rather nasty letter and another form.

This time Mr. Spelvin lost his temper and wrote in enormous printed letters on the form in that space reserved for general remarks:—"Cook sprained thumb picking wild flowers on day off."

* * * *

HE THOUGHT he had been rather clever in his sarcasm, but last week there comes to him another communication from the commission. He is summoned to appear at a hearing at 10 a. m. in room 1322 of the Labor Department, bringing all pertinent books, papers and records and all witnesses to the disaster at his plant last July, failing which he will be subject to prosecution and, on conviction, to a heavy fine and long imprisonment.

At this point Mr. Spelvin thought he would call up somebody, so he looked in the telephone book, got the number of the commission, and told the girl on the switchboard that he wanted to discuss an industrial accident with someone who had sufficient grasp and authority to advise him well. She said, "Wait a minute," and presently a man's voice said, "Hello. What's your trouble?"

"My cook," said Mr. Spelvin. "Last summer she sprained her thumb picking wild flowers on her day off. No explosives. No lathes or unprotected saws. Just wild flowers on her day off. Slipped and sprained her thumb. Now I am summoned to a hearing with all books, papers and records and witnesses. Can you advise me?"

"Oh, don't pay no attention to it," the man said.

"But they say I can be fined and imprisoned," Mr. Spelvin said.

"Don't pay no attention," said the man. "It's only a matter of form. Just don't pay it no attention. Just ignore it. It's, you know, it's the law, like."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Life Is Like That.

Life is getting more complex every minute. A scientist announced the other day that it is now possible to tell the exact age of fish.

* * * *

This was followed closely by an announcement that a way had been found to weigh the human breath.

* * * *

All our life we have wanted to tell the age of a fish. We've never been very accurate about it, although we have done some tall guessing, usually in restaurants.

* * * *

But think of it! No longer will it be possible for a fish to go around hiding its age!

* * * *

It's all done by counting the rings on its tail. It's similar to the way you tell the age of a tree. (Only it will be much easier because you don't have to climb a fish.)

* * * *

Fish have always fooled us. Fish that swim upstream, frinstance, always look older than fish that swim downstream. It tells on 'em. And you take fish off Florida: they begin to look pretty old quite young in life, through constant fear that Roosevelt is coming.

* * * *

This discovery about weighing a breath intrigues most people but they can't make up their minds whether it is a better spare-time diversion than telling the age of fish or not. There are breaths and there are breaths. An outgoing breath is inclined to be a little heavier than an incoming one, we understand.

* * * *

(Now don't get this all mixed up and concentrate on telling the age of a breath and the weight of a fish.—Ed.)

* * * *

Scientists are hard at work (they have it on most of us there, mister) and more surprises are expected any minute. We understand they may soon provide a way to answer the question that has stirred us for years: How tall is a hiccough?

* * * *

And who will say that we shall not be able to gauge the weight of a giggle, the circumference of a wish, the cubic content of a nightmare and the age at which moths do their best work in flannel trousers?

* * * *

* * * *

But it still doesn't seem to do a thing about correcting a slice, stopping falling hair or picking a daily double.

Japan promises she will maintain the "open door" in China. That's no door; it's a loose hatch in a hurricane.

Mexico Letter

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico, D. F.

PROBABLY the outstanding internal development in Mexico has been the deathblow which President Cardenas gave to the National Revolutionary Party in his December message to Congress. As was predicted in The Post several months ago, the P. N. R. had outlived its usefulness. Symbol of all that was despicable in the Calles regime, its continued existence was incompatible with the Cardenas attitude toward "functional democracy."

According to a proclamation issued recently by the officers of the P. N. R., charged with the organization of a new party, workers, peasants and soldiers are to form the bulwark of Mexico's future voters, each group to have its representatives.

But acrimonious debating has already begun, since it has been noted that the balance of power will rest with the elements which formerly ran the P. N. R. Moreover, it looks as though the soldiers will be greatly outnumbered by the peasants and that the peasants, though numerically stronger, will be in a position inferior to that of the workers. Add to this the jealousies which are sure to develop as to the leadership of the "Soldiers and Workers Party" (as it has been tentatively called) and it can be seen that troubled waters await the launching of this new political ship.

Toledano And Morones Steering For Collision.

IT IS reasonable to suppose that Vicente Lombardo Toledano, secretary general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (C. T. M.), will have plenty to say about the new party's policies. On the other hand, Luis Morones, founder of the Regional Confederation of Mexican Workers (C. R. O. M.), thinks that his organization is old enough and strong enough to have its opinion taken into serious consideration. The rivalry of these two leaders in the ranks of Mexican labor may lead to trouble more serious than that which recently brought them into bloody conflict in the textile zone of Orizaba, Vera Cruz.

For several years now, the zone has been troubled by intersyndicate wars staged by members of the C. T. M. and the C. R. O. M. Nearly a year ago, President Cardenas imposed an agreement on the region, but it was never observed. Early in January, the situation grew so tense that a general "paro," or walkout, was threatened. The Morones syndicate claimed that Lombardo's men were trying to create a situation unfavorable to the C. R. O. M. Toledano replied that his workers had the right to work in the Orizaba zone and that they intended to keep that right.

By the middle of the month, street fighting had taken place and several men on both sides were killed and wounded. Almost at once President Cardenas appeared in Orizaba and demanded that the workers submit their difficulties to the arbitration of the government department of labor. As this is written, an agreement has not yet been reached, but the papers of January 21 carried a conciliatory message from Lombardo, addressed to his "companeros of the C. R. O. M.," so it is hoped that an early settlement can be reached.

In the Federal district, another important gain for labor was the raising of the minimum wage from 1.50 to 2.50 pesos per day. No one can deny that most Mexican laborers are in need of more money in exchange for their work. What seems to be the big difficulty is to procure a real gain for the wage-earner, for no sooner does his salary rise than everything he has to buy rises with it, often leaving him worse off than he was before.

Business Reacts Against Increase In Import Duties.

IT IS too early to judge yet of the effect which the January 21 decree on increased import duties will have on Mexican business as a whole. The government declared that the increase was absolutely necessary to preserve a balance between foreign currency coming into the country and that which was being sent out. The first reactions of business men have been unfavorable, but they may be able to take a broad view of the matter once their companies start to function under the new scale.

Since many of the articles affected fall into the "luxury class," the great masses of the people will not be immediately disturbed by price changes. Nevertheless, auto trucks, typewriters, tires, paints and varnishes, heavy machinery, farm implements, etc., can hardly be classed as luxuries. The duties will be raised to their highest point between January 21 and May 1. After that they will resume a position somewhat higher than they held previous to January 21, but not so high as during the present period.

The oil question, at least for the time being, is at a stalemate. The companies are supposed to pay approximately $7,500,000 in wage increases and back salaries. This they have refused to do, although the arbitration board has again required them to do so. It is reasonably safe to say that this question, like most others, will eventually have to go to President Cardenas for a decision. Of late, governmental favor seems to have shifted to the Aguila-Dutch Shell Corporation, an English enterprise, with the Americans left definitely out in the cold. Some observers look upon the Mexican oil question as simply one of the factors in the world struggle for future oil supply which is being waged between the United States and England, with other nations playing the role of bystanders.

Silver has been prominent in capital discussions ever since Secretary Suarez and Mr. Morgenthau got together in Washington and arranged for the future purchase of Mexico's 1938 silver output. In his press conference he underlined the fact that "Mexico had surrendered nothing in exchange for what she received." This was to quiet the fears of those who are ever suspicious of "Tio Sam" and who constantly envision his desire to obtain naval bases in Lower California or on the Gulf Coast, provided he cannot secure a lien on northern positions of Mexican territory.

Immigration And Tourism Prompt New Cabinet Choice.

PROBABLY the most important cabinet change made by President Cardenas in 1938 was the appointment of Garcia Tellez to be Secretary of the Interior (Gobernacion). Two good reasons, at least, prompted this action. First, there have been many rumors and much agitation concerning the illegal entrance into the country of what the press terms "undesirables." Second, the development of the tourist trade has not been at all in proportion to what the government and businessmen hoped it would be. Since both the departments of immigration and "tourism" fall under the jurisdiction of Secretary Garcia Tellez, he is expected to give his full attention and undeniable talents to the solution of problems connected with them.

Charges have been made that certain foreigners have entered the country under the proviso that allows them to become immigrants if they follow the calling of agriculturists. As a rule, these people have gone into small business instead, thereby breaking the laws and hurting, in addition, the multitude of Mexicans who make their living from small industries.

It has been printed in the American press that the agitation against these alleged illegalities is proof that the Cardenas government is becoming "fascistic" or, at least, anti-Semitic. In order to back up this charge, it would first be necessary to determine just how often foreigners have entered Mexico either as listed farmers or under cover of bribes reportedly paid to agents of Gobernacion. In the second place, the Mexican habit of calling all foreigners from South Europe "Polacos, Rusos, Judios, Armenios, etc.," must be taken into consideration. Just how much of the immigration since 1926 has been really Jewish in character is difficult to estimate at this time. And yet, there is no question about the number of Syrians, Armenians, and other representatives of Mediterranean races who have become residents of Mexico within the same period.

To this writer's mind it is loose writing to characterize the Cardenas government as "fascistic" when it has proven so many times its adhesion to a strongly leftist platform which often verges on communism.

The slump in tourist trade has led to further attempts to find out what is causing Americans to go elsewhere on their vacations. Hotel men point out the large sums that other governments spend in trying to attract American tourists, and they contend that Mexico would be the first choice of hundreds of thousands if the country were exploited in the right way.

Cardenas is interested in promoting tourist traffic. But it seems that the matter will have to rest until the important labor, industrial and financial problems have been solved, at least for the time being.

Reich Enigma

By Barnet Nover

Which Way The Third Reich?

AFTER FIVE years of Nazi rule, Germany today remains the greatest of all European question marks.

Actions of the Hitler government, both within the domestic and the external sphere, have not infrequently produced grave alarm in the rest of Europe. Even its silences have come to seem ominous.

It is possible to imagine, for instance, that when Hitler suddenly canceled the Reichstag meeting scheduled for the fifth anniversary of his assumption of the chancellorship, he was doing so out of a desire to avoid muddling international waters at a peculiarly dangerous time.

No longer can the Reichstag meet for a purely routine session. It has become only a sounding board for the Fuehrer's most important pronouncements. Every one of its meetings since 1933 has been the occasion for the explosion of some international bombshell. Now Hitler may have decided that it is not to Germany's interests to show her hand, hence that it would be wiser to postpone the Reichstag meeting for some other time.

* * * *

WAS EUROPE relieved? Not at all. Behind Hitler's silence many see, whether rightly or wrongly, the ominous possibility that it cloaks some dark purpose best kept hidden for the time being.

This view may be right and it may be wrong. No one knows. But it is no secret that there is a strong belief in some German quarters that the Third Reich need only bide its time and without any effort on her part the fruit she seeks will fall into her hands.

That was precisely what happened in the case of Danzig when, through remote control alone, the free city became thoroughly Nazified. The same thing, it is said, will happen in the case of Austria, now unhappily poised between the two partners of the Berlin-Rome axis; of Czechoslovakia, whose principal ally, France, is in the midst of a serious internal crisis and whose allies of the Little Entente are moving out of the French toward the German camp of the rest of Europe.

* * * *

THERE IS AN EVEN more pointed argument that can be made by Germans in favor of a waiting policy. During the past five years efforts by the western democracies to bring the Third Reich around to a policy of all-around international conciliation have been repeatedly rebuffed.

Eden tried to sound out the Nazi regime by means of a questionnaire. It was not even given the courtesy of a reply. Sir John Simon and Lord Halifax tried the device of a personal interview with the Fuehrer. Nothing came of them. Blum offered financial assistance to the Reich to take care of its exchange problem if Hitler, in return, would agree to become a party to a comprehensive peace program. He was brusquely turned down.

Premier Van Zeeland of Belgium was sent on a mission to find out whether Germany would agree to abandon autarchy. Before his mission got far, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who favors at least a limited degree of economic co-operation with the western democracies, was pushed out of the economics ministry.

And yet, despite all these repeated rebuffs, Great Britain continues to court Hitler, hoping against hope that what happened yesterday will not happen tomorrow.

Possibly the British will yet be proved right. But, obviously, the British attitude has made it and continues to make it eminently safe and easy for Hitler and his ally, Mussolini, to indulge in international blackmail.

* * * *

THE TROUBLE with a waiting policy, however, is that it involves an uncertain time element and before the expected can occur the unexpected may intervene to prevent it.

In November, 1936, for instance, both the Berlin and Rome governments were quite certain that Franco would be in Madrid in short order and Spain would be Fascist. Well, Franco never took Madrid and since then the Spanish government has built up an army which has been giving an excellent account of itself in and around Teruel.

Then there was Austria. When the Austro-German agreement of June, 1936, was signed the expectation in Berlin was that it would not be long before the Nazis would manage to take over and by a bloodless revolution unite Austria and Germany. It has not happened. The Schusehnigg government is certainly not free of danger of overthrow. But the fact remains that thus far it has held on.

* * * *

THERE is also the problem of the Little Entente. The drift of events in Yugoslavia and Rumania has undoubtedly been favorable to the Third Reich. The men in control in Bucharest and Belgrade are certainly friendly to Hitler. That is also the case in Warsaw, where Col. Beck acts like an outpost of the Wilhelmstrasse.

But the fact must be recognized that there is no certainty that Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia, having failed to stay put as wholehearted allies of France, would or could stay put as appendages of the Berlin-Rome axis. That axis, too, is none too firm. Even less so is the anti-Communist triangle, in view of the way Japan is getting bogged down more and more in the Chinese morass.

Time may be, as some Germans insist, on Hitler's side. But there is no certainty of it. In the meantime, internal pressures within the Third Reich are not subsiding to any marked degree. The problem of economics may, temporarily, have been solved by rearmament. Will it remain solved? And if it does not will internal pressure lead to further activity by Germany in the foreign field?

Nobody knows. But the very circumstance that a waiting policy on Germany's part cannot be taken for granted has intensified the alarm of the other powers concerning Hitler's next move.

New German Training

Germans are scheduled for an extra dose of intensive training in 1938. They are to be trained away from bread, butter and the lighter meats and in the direction of potatoes, fish and ham. An official order of the Reich health board urges that the people be weaned away from liquor and tobacco on the ground of public health. Does liquor include beer? It is, indeed, a new Germany if the traditional humane figure of the honest German citizen with his stein and his pipe is to pass into history.

But dietary regimentation is nothing compared to special education in silence. This is now urged by Gen. von Unruh—whose name, appropriately enough, would be translated as Gen. Unrest. He wants people to keep their mouths shut in public and not blab out secrets useful to the enemies of the Third Reich. Gen. von Unruh says that many such secrets were unwittingly betrayed in the World War. He now says, "The art and strength of keeping silent must be taught from youth onward."

Why any special effort in this field should be necessary in the Third Reich is hard to say. The first point on every dictator's program is to make the people go into silence, and one of the largest items on his budget is keeping them there.

(From the New York Times.)

Gong He Fat Choy.

"GONG HE FAT CHOY," I said.

"Shut up," said the boss.

"You cannot suppress my spirits," I said, "because 'Gong He Fat Choy' means Happy New Year."

"You're just about a month too late," he said.

Then I told him what he should have known all along. This is the Chinese New Year. And up and down H street they are saying "Gong He Fat Choy."

"I still want you to shut up," he said, "because I am busy."

"There's something melodic," I said, "in that antique greeting, 'Gong He Fat Choy,' which means health, good fortune and any number of things."

"Give," he said. "Get it over with, and leave me alone. Let me work."

McCARTHY.

So then, I let him have it. You see, yesterday was the Chinese New Year, and I went down to Chinatown to find out what it was all about.

* * * *

BUT Georgie Moy, who runs the Joy Inn and is a friend of mine, wasn't there. He was home sleeping, according to his mother. And Mrs. Moy wasn't willing to give me any information on the New Year.

"Chinese New Year?" I said.

"Chinese New Year," she said, which left us both at page eight and in no manner gaining ground.

Mrs. Moy was ensconced in the ante-room to the kitchen, and the air was redolent with all manner of Chinese foods, of such nature as to take an afternoon to learn the names.

"What does that sign say, Mrs. Moy?" I asked, pointing to a flower pot with a four-letter inscription on it which looked much like a piece of paper three pheasants had walked over, having first dragged their feet across an ink pad.

"Means Happy New Year," she said. And there the matter rested. She would answer no other question. She just giggled. But it was mighty pleasant sitting there in the ante-room to the kitchen breathing in 60-cent meals at every gasp. However, it wasn't getting the story, so I went down the street in the 600 block of H street northwest to the China Inn.

* * * *

THERE everything was to the good. Mrs. Sing Shew who is the wife of the proprietor, had some trouble with my English, but the beer had been made in Baltimore, and the prints on the walls were definitely Chinese.

Purple birds soared across skies heavy with red and pink clouds, and the young waitresses were most helpful.

"She has trouble with your English," they told me. And I was most sorry that I didn't speak Chinese. And the waitresses couldn't help me out, because while they spoke English, the only Chinese they spoke wouldn't have been reprinted in a respectable Shanghai newspaper.

But the effort was sincere and we were getting nowhere at a great pace. At that point the doors swung open from H street and the room swam with such a vision as would have delighted Vachel Lindsay when he wrote the Chinese nightingale.

She wore a purple hat and her voice had in it the tinkling of bells, and there was a graciousness to her.

"I am having trouble," I said. "I am getting nowhere with ever increasing speed."

And she volunteered to help, inasmuch as she was a Chinese who had been born in America. She spoke perfect English, with a diction so precise that most of our local debutantes would have traded in their unpaid-for evening gowns for the same.

"What do you want to know?" she asked, and while the waitresses gathered around the solitary reporter, the purple bird flapped three red clouds off the ancient print.

I told her that I wanted to find out something about the Chinese New Year, and a consultation followed. 'Mama' Sing Shew volunteered the information in Chinese, and the young lady in the purple hat translated it into English and the young waitresses retranslated it into my language.

* * * *

FOR YOUR information, the facts thus obtained are as follows: The Chinese celebrated their New Years on January 31 and they, naturally, celebrated New Year Eve the previous night; fire crackers were duly set off on H street between midnight and 4 a. m. of their New Year's morning and no burns were inflicted. The Chinese, unlike Americans, do not like to go out and get drunk in night clubs. They prefer to sit at home and welcome the New Year as befitting its importance; their year has 12 months and is regulated more or less by the moon; their months are not given names, but are referred to, sensibly enough, as the first, the second and the third, etc.

In San Francisco and Chinese centers the Chinese celebrate with dragon parades and flowers, but Washington's Chinatown is not large enough to support such activities; the pious Chinese (and there was a consultation between the lovely Chinese girl in the purple hat and the two white waitresses on the meaning of 'pious') do not eat meat on the first day of the new year, but most of them feast on that eventful day.

They feast on vegetables and dried oysters; they also make bean cakes, and in some strange fashion incorporate bean sprouts into many dishes; they visit each others' homes; they give money to the children and the unmarried as a good luck token, and the money is wrapped in red paper.

And when they hold "open house" on New Year's Day they serve candy ("You people serve wine, don't you?" asked the girl in the purple hat); and if you appreciated the candy you leave money wrapped in red paper in the center of the candy dish; and while most of the drinking is done on New Year's Eve, the favorite drinks are Chinese whisky and rice wine.

And the favored beverage this year is Ungha Pay which is a rose petal wine, sweet with the smell of flowers, and according to the lovely lady in the purple hat, a "good drink!"

This year's celebration? Well, on account of the war they're all eating less and sending the difference home.

Won't Back U.S. In Orient War, Methodists Cry

Roosevelt Policy Attacked by National Youth Council of Church.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—The executive committee of the National Council of Methodist Youth asserted today it would not support the Government in a Far Eastern war.

"It will not be our war," the committee said in a letter to President Roosevelt. "We cannot fight in it."

The executive body, headed by Thomas Pendell, of Los Angeles, who made the letter public, said:

"We express the opinion of the National Council of Methodist Youth through this committee, Mr. President, when we say: If you lead us into war in the Far East, we will not support your Administration in that war."

Protest "24-Hour Policy."

The group protested "the provisional 24-hour foreign policy of your Administration; particularly in the State Department."

"Our further indictment against you, Mr. President," they wrote, "includes your recently announced naval expansion program . . . We condemn, as two steps in the militarization of America, your program for the increase of the Navy by 20 per cent, and the further extension of the Army."

The committee protested to the President also "the manner in which you defeated the Ludlow war referendum measure in Congress.

False Economy Charged.

"You spoke and acted against any real use of the democratic process which you spoke so much about in the last election. . . . Mr. President, were you afraid such an amendment would hamper your war preparations? We believe that it would."

The group said it noted "certain factors in your internal program which call forth our commendation."

"We admire," they said, "your insistence on the restoration of purchasing power. However, this must not be built on a false prewar economy of rearmament; rather, on the more stable elements of your program of soil conservation, Federal housing, and cheap electric power."

Contest to Seek Essays on Spain

Prizes totaling $1,000 for student compositions on the Spanish conflict will be awarded by the League of American Writers, Donald Ogden Stewart, president of the league, announced yesterday.

The subject of the compositions will be "The Anti-Fascist Struggle in Spain Today in Its Relation to the General Welfare of the American Citizen Tomorrow."

Deadline for the contest will be July 4, award of prizes to be announced by November 11. First prize will be $500, with other prizes of $250, $125, $75 and $50. Students of American and Canadian schools and colleges have been invited to send their compositions to Ellen Kinkead, 3354 Clay street, San Francisco, or Rolfe Humphries, 381 Fourth avenue, New York City.

Naturalist to Talk.

John E. Doerr, jr., associate park naturalist for Crater Lake National Park, will speak on Crater Lake tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the new Interior Department auditorium. Sponsored by the National Park Service, the lecture will be illustrated with colored motion pictures. The public is invited.

Jackson Gains At Hearings on His Promotion

Opposition to Trust Expert for U. S. Solicitor Diminishes.

By the Associated Press.

Senate hearings on the President's promotion of Robert H. Jackson—outspoken critic of "monopoly"—to be Solicitor General demonstrated principally yesterday that opposition in confirmation was decreasing.

A judiciary sub-committee received from Attorney General Cummings a strong recommendation that Jackson's nomination be approved. There were some indications that the sub-committee might act favorably on the appointment without further hearings, and, in fact, without hearing Jackson himself.

That depended, however, on decisions still to be made by Senators Austin (Republican), Vermont, and King (Democrat), of Utah. Both intended to read Jackson's recent speeches (accusing capital, among other things, of going on strike to force a liquidation of the New Deal) and then determine whether they wanted to question him.

Otherwise, the attitude of the sub-committee was so evident that Chairman McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, told reporters there was no doubt in his mind that at an early date, possibly today, it would vote to report the nomination favorably to the full Judiciary Committee.

Cummings told the committee that Jackson's experience as a Government lawyer had been "not only extensive, but unique, highly successful and entirely satisfactory to the Department of Justice."

Austin mentioned Jackson's speeches, and asked:

"Do they represent the attitude of the Department of Justice?"

"The attitude of the department is reflected by the Attorney General. My views are contained in the speeches I have made. They will have to stand by themselves."

"That doesn't answer my question."

"Absolutely," Cummings said.

Economist to Speak.

Dr. E. Isaacs, economist, will speak on "Pressures in Modern Life" at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest. The meeting is free and open to the public.

Stan Laurel Files Tax Appeal Here

Stan Laurel, famous member of the comedy team of Laurel and Hardy, and his former wife, Lois Laurel, yesterday protested paying income taxs on money spent in a property settlement at the time of their divorce in 1934.

They filed appeals with the United States Board of Tax Appeals here against deficiency assessments of $1,826 against each of them. The protests were filed from Beverly Hills, Calif.

The bureau has ruled that deductions for divorce costs were to be classed as "personal matters."

Blood Tests Slated.

Free Wassermann blood tests, standard check for presence of venereal disease, will be given today to George Washington University students, on application to the office of Dr. L. H. Cate, 708 Twentieth street northwest, it was announced yesterday by the University health service.

Is "Little Business" For Or Against Roosevelt?

In recent speeches the President has championed the cause of the "little fellow." He has sought to make them more receptive to the philosophy of the New Deal. Are the "little fellows"—shop owners, small manufacturers, wholesale dealers—for or against Roosevelt? The Gallup Poll made a cross-section survey of "little business" on this subject. What did the Poll find out? Be sure to

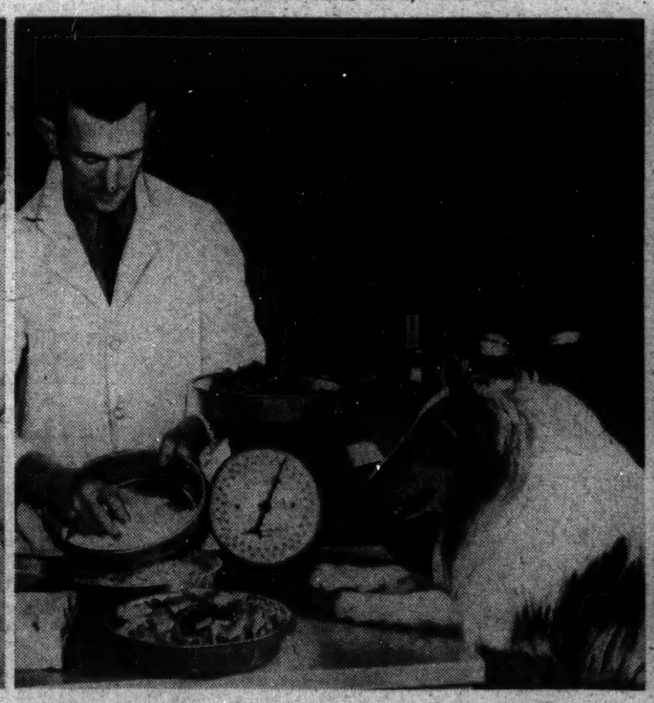
A Champion Girds for Westminster Show



Wide World Photos

1 Rigorous training for championships is a dog's life which fits well into the scheme of existence of Champion Beulaha's Silver Merick of Bellhaven, affectionately known as Joe, a Blue Merle male collie in training for the Westminster dog show at New York later this month. The day for Joe starts with a sudsy bath.

2 After being bathed and dried, Joe is brushed and combed for hours until his silk-like hair is smooth and glistening. One of the kennel's pups, dreaming of the day when he will be groomed for a show, watches every move. Joe's owner is Mrs. Florence Ilch, of Red Bank, N. J. The Westminster show is the blue ribbon event of dogdom. Joe won best of breed in 1936 and was runner-up last year, and is living by a strict and well-ordered routine to win top honors again this year.

3 Joe watches one of his handlers carefully weigh out a meal. His breakfast consists of rice flakes, milk and eggs which comes as soon as he finishes his morning romp. He eats a meal of boiled meat and a combination of vegetables at 4 p. m., has a nap at 6 p. m. and eats the third time at 9 p. m., before going to bed. This third meal consists of a quart of milk and a pound of raw beef with eggs. He eats about three pounds of food each day. Joe rises promptly at 7 a. m.

4 This is the way Joe will appear at the show. His training is as thorough as that of a prize fighter or other athlete. Joe is playful and enjoys his romps but must be watched closely so that burrs and briars will not tear his beautiful coat.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Secretary Tells 'Anxious Mother' How She Bested Employer Who Sought Her 'Downfall.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was deeply interested in the advice you gave to "Anxious Mother" in your column of January 26, regarding her daughter's conduct with her employer, "who prefers a girl in his office who will make love to him and go out on parties with him." I heartily agree with you that the girl should resign—if she can. But I wonder if it has ever occurred to you that money alone provides the necessities of life, and that, disgusting as it may seem, there are instances in life when stern principles must be compromised, and the lesser of two evils must be embraced.

• • • •

I faced the same proposition once, where it became necessary for me to use my head rather than yield to my impulse to slap my employer's face and tell him frankly what a cad I considered him. And may I add that while the part I played was not to my liking, nevertheless I came out on top eventually, without sacrificing either my morals or my reputation.

• • • •

Here is the story: It took place at the peak of the depression. I was married. So was my employer. He knew my husband. His wife and I were friends. My husband had been out of work for two years. I was the sole support of both of us, and, to add to complications, I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. My salary had been cut, by various slices, to the bone; I was making barely enough to keep body and soul together. My employer knew all this, and, being the worst possible type of scoundrel (as I was to learn much later) adopted tactics far more subtle than the ordinary "passes." He became the "understanding friend," always ready to stand by in time of need.

• • • •

When the company would have discharged me, owing to my ailing health and the economic trend of the day, he arranged to have my services retained, never mentioning the fact to me, but seeing that I learned of it through others. He went out of his way, apparently, to contact firms in an effort to secure employment for my husband. He saw to it that I received money from bogus sources, which I later learned came from his own pocket. Knowing we could not afford any amusements, he showered us with tickets to this and that, which for unexplained reasons he did not see fit to use. He was a shrewd person and spent quite a bit of time and money building up my gratitude toward and confidence in him. Because my mind was torn with worry, I failed to see through him until later.

• • • •

Finally he commenced the real dirty work. Very subtly, he commenced to undermine my husband in my eyes. Never anything outspoken. He knew I would have come to my husband's defense immediately. But he was terribly concerned because my husband had just missed out on this job, or failed to see that certain man, and "it was all such a pity," and I was "such a plucky and uncomplaining little person," and "fate certainly did have an odd way of holding out on my husband by giving all the luck to the man just ahead of him," and "if my husband had only been as lucky as John Jones, who had gotten that splendid position just the other day, and only three months out of work, too. Too bad! Too bad!" etc.

• • • •

The third step began one day when everything had gone wrong and my nerves were at the breaking point . . . Frankly, I was in tears. My employer didn't take me in his arms and dry my pretty eyes and all that sort of thing. No, he was smarter. He asked me if it wasn't time I faced facts and had a heart-to-heart talk with myself. Didn't I see I couldn't go on much longer as I was going? Didn't I know I wasn't strong enough? That no man in the world was worth such a sacrifice? Couldn't I see that any man worth his salt would get out with a pick-and-shovel gang, if necessary, rather than let his wife kill herself for his benefit? It was a man's world and no woman should be expected to battle with the impossible to keep her husband safe and warm, especially when he was an able bodied man who should be breaking his neck to keep his wife secure and comfortable. He hated to say it, but he had foreseen such a climax long ago and hoped I wouldn't think him unkind by saying he considered me a fool for my trouble. He knew he had overstepped the proprieties as an employer, but as a friend he had my best interests at heart and it pained him to see anyone so weak and helpless and courageous so outrageously taken advantage of, even by her husband.

• • • •

Time went on and gradually I came to feel that he was right; that I was a fool to do without everything, even decent meals, for a man who didn't seem to care how things worked out. I was feeling sorry for myself and thinking what a fine, honest, decent person my employer was; how he looked out for his wife; what a comfortable, cheerful home they had . . . So I left my husband. Naturally I told my employer and he was properly impressed, though he expressed sympathy over the whole sorry mess.

• • • •

Well, to shorten a long story, he began by having me work at night, having dinner sent up from the restaurant, telephoning his wife and telling her about it... Then, one night, out of a clear sky, he kissed me and told me that he loved me. I was dumfounded, for if there was one man in the world I trusted and respected, it was he. I had pictured him as an example of decency and integrity; had looked up to him as a man the whole world should pattern after. Words failed me, and for a moment I didn't know what to say to him. But I rallied and reminded him of his wife, our mutual friendship, of the years he had known me, of my own character and reputation. I tried to appeal to what honor I thought he had; but as I went on, I saw he had none; and that all of his kindness had been a build-up for that moment. Naturally, I told him that as soon as I could find another position, I would resign; but that inasmuch as the whole matter had come up unexpectedly for me, surely he owed me at least a month in which to locate something else.

• • • •

I couldn't just toss my head and walk out, even though my honor might have been at stake. For where could I have gone? I had no home. My bank account was gone. I had no means of support other than my own efforts. Jobs were at a premium; the job I had was better than the average for those who did my type of work. I liked the work I did, and the company I worked for. I realized, of course, that I couldn't stay on with the man under the circumstances, unless I could make him see reason, and, after failing in my efforts to find another position, that is exactly what I accomplished, eventually.

• • • •

But if you think it was an easy task you're mistaken. It was the biggest muddle I have even been in . . . I made clear my position as a decent woman, explained my need of the position, told him that after the trials I had been through I could appreciate the weakness in human nature and make allowance for it. I told him I had probably come to depend too much on his friendship, and might possibly have given him the right to think I looked upon him as more than a friend. I said that while I could not tolerate a recurrence of lovemaking, I would nevertheless forgive the offense and forget it. I refused to work alone with him at night, or to be around him at all after hours except in the presence of his wife, and I never gave her any indication that there was any alteration in my relationship with her husband.

• • • •

Seeing him in a new light, I realized I had been unfair to my husband; that, while temporarily downed by circumstances over which he had no control he was honest and decent at least, and was not going out of his way to plot some woman's downfall by means of phony virtues and insincere kindnesses. He had faults, but his intentions were honorable. I got in touch with him, asked him to forgive my lack of trust and understanding and to take me back. A reconciliation was effected and we have since lived happily together. In the meantime, he, too, had had time to do a little thinking; had realized the burden I was carrying and had decided to redouble his efforts to remedy the situation, which he did.

• • • •

My pleasant, but firm, refusal to have any other than a strictly impersonal relationship with my employer eventually wore down his attempts to have it otherwise, and, in the end, I had his respect, his wife's friendship, my job, a promotion as business improved and greater happiness than ever with my husband . . . I have learned that nothing is to be gained, ever, by running away from unpleasant situations; that the strengthening thing to do is to fight them out, right there on the spot, and win . . . There are all sorts of men in the world, but I maintain that not one in a million will fail to respect a woman who respects herself and who lays her cards on the table face up. One's honor can be protected and one doesn't have to lose a perfectly good job to do it.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Overdrawn Villain.

DEAR O. W. K.: If you will reread my advice to "Anxious Mother" concerning her daughter, you will observe I recommended, first, the practice of just such feasible diplomacy as you successfully employed, and resignation as her last defense, in case diplomacy failed. Would you, with your high sense of honor, have remained in your employer's service if he had made it one of the requirements of the job that you "make love to him and go out on parties with him?" Such is the case with "A. M.'s" daughter, or so she says.

• • • •

Incidentally, it is my opinion that you have read a great deal more villainy into your employer's conduct than actually existed. Perhaps your villification of him is an unconscious attempt to rationalize your own transient desertion of your husband; to place the blame on another's shoulders. To my mind, it is entirely conceivable that he may have truly pitied you and despised your husband—as the materially successful so-called rugged individualist so often despises the economic failure—from the beginning; that his many camouflaged generosities and kindnesses may have been inspired originally by sentimentality rather than lechery; that, quite unintentionally, he fell in love with you as time went on, as a benefactor is wont to learn to love the grateful (if personable) object of his patronage; and that the love-making episode in the office was something in the nature of spontaneous combustion, and not the coolly plotted climax to a crafty "build-up."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

THE NICEST compliment this daily stint was ever paid came from Mrs. Eugene Meyer, brilliant wife of a famous publisher. She said, "I like your pieces because they are gay and high-spirited—no mean gossip, no back-biting." This made me happy, and toward that ideal I struggle. But now and then a sad event happens here, involving an outstanding woman of our town, and I should be remiss if I did not pay a tribute to the memory of Rosamond Pinchot, who died so tragically a week ago, at the height of her powers.

ALICE HUGHES.

This lovely daughter of Amos Pinchot was only 33 when she said "enough" to life. She was one of the most beautiful and exciting girls in this city of pretty women. She had true glamour—not the phony article which comes from cosmetic pots and press agents. Wherever she went, all eyes followed her. Unlike many tall girls—she was 5 feet 10—her carriage was superb and really regal. It was this proud and magnificent bearing which brought her the role of the Nun in "The Miracle" from Morris Gest—and then she was still in her teens. She was naturally queenly—her free stride and the gallant tilt of her head set her apart. Truly, she was a woman among women.

But Rosamond loved two things with a too-great love, perhaps—her husband and the theater. In these two loves she was frustrated, though she never in her short life suffered from delusions of grandeur. Her married life ended disastrously, and the stage and screen found it difficult to make a place for her. Tired, dispirited at last, Rosamond said good-by, and our giddy world is much the poorer for her passing. In our several meetings, she and I seemed to understand each other spontaneously, and I am proud that she was my friend. And it was an almost unbearably sad farewell for those of us privileged to know her.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—It's long over, but the village still chatters about various events during the visit of wonder-child, Sonja Henie and her skating circus. Over a hundred thousand people eyed the blonde pixie on runners during her Garden stay and noted the added showmanship she has picked up on the movie lots. She no longer skates for titles, but for cuteness and glamour. And did you hear about how she stood up our peppy little mayor, Hizzoner LaGuardia? Fiorello actually called on her, at the Waldorf—and no Henie! Later, she said she always spent the day in bed before skating, and made a nice apology to the Head Man. He accepted it gracefully and all was sweet and nice.

New Bolero Suits Lend Air Of Spring to Winter Outfits

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

SUITS which have set the fashion for in-between-season costumes to give an air of spring to winter wardrobes have gone complicated. No longer is it just the tailored suit that is getting attention, although this American classic has lost none of its prestige by the competition. To make the suit collections more interesting, there now are bolero suits, jacketed affairs with pleated skirts, and fingertip length suits of the popular tuxedo front styling. And, all of these in diverse materials and variations on the particular suit theme. Any of these interpretations purchased now will be correct for the Easter parade and springtime wear; hence, as practical as they are smart and timely.

Wool jersey, nubby tweed, flannel, wool gabardine, men's wear woolens, light weight tweeds, are some of the suit materials that are in the style spotlight at present. The color range extends from black, navy and brown to the lighter toned colors such as gray, beige, medium blue and pastels. While dark accessories are the usual accents for wear in town now, it is predicted bright color tones will be much in evidence come spring; it is to be a season for gay-colored hats, bags, gloves and shoes, particularly where accessories complement tweeds and the more casual type of fabrics.

Regardless of the suit preference, skirts are shorter; button trimming abounds; costume jewelry dramatizes either blouses or sweater, and fur scarfs are almost a "must" when they are worn without a topcoat. Suit hats are presented in about a 1001 different versions—it all depends upon whether you want your suit to appear tailored, casual, or dressed up. According to the modern fashion dictates, suits can now go to any daytime or informal evening function, with complete assurance of being in tune with the occasion. For this reason and because suits are so generally becoming and well liked, fastidious women are buying not only one but several suits, either of the same or varied styling.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

UP TO THE AGE of 30, it is fairly easy to keep your figure, but once past that age every woman needs a beauty program of daily exercise. Fat cells gather when the muscles grow flabby and it is impossible to keep slim in the right places without exercise.

Of the approximate 680 muscles in the body, the abdominals are the most important to your health and figure. If you only realized how important these muscles are, you would keep this muscular girdle in tone in spite of your dislike for exercise. All your habits tend to weaken the abdominal muscles. We slump in sitting or walking, and such activity as we do get seldom involves use of the muscles. Aside from the health angle, weakness of these figure-controlling muscles gives as pronounced an effect of shapelessness as excessive overweight. Make a practice of sitting well back in your chair with the hips against the chairback, and the abdominal muscles pulled up. In walking, do not try to hold the tummy in. Rather, pull up with the lower abdominal wall.

If you are past 30, your exercise program should concentrate on the movements which slim the middle of the figure, such as the following:

TO TONE THE TUMMY MUSCLES.

POSITION: Lying flat on back, knees bent and held together, toes pointed.

MOVEMENT: Twist at the waist, keeping the upper part of the body as flat on the floor as possible Twist to the left, then shoot both legs straight out, toes pointed and legs close to the floor. Bend knees to chest and roll back to starting position. Twist at the waist to the right, and shoot the legs out straight again. Repeat three times each side, gradually increasing the exercise to eight times.

A WAISTLINE STRETCHER.

POSITION: Standing erect, feet together, arms stretched overhead width of shoulders apart.

MOVEMENT: Stretch up as high as possible and reach with the hands. Now, force both arms back behind the ears, continuing the upward stretch. Be sure to keep the your head erect. Stretch again and repeat six times. This exercise involves all the trunk muscles and slims the waistline.

TO SLIM THE MIDSECTION AND STREAMLINE THE HIPS.

MOVEMENT: Keeping one leg on the floor, raise opposite leg high in air without bending the knees. Hold. Return to floor, and raise other leg. Repeat ten times, later increasing to 25. Alternate legs. This is a tri-purpose exercise which strengthens the abdominal wall, slims the waist and reduces the buttocks. It is included in the set "Streamline the Midsection," for which you should send.

Do streamlining exercises daily to keep your figure young.

ORANGE PUDDING

⅓ pound of almond macroons
1 pint of milk
4 eggs
½ cup of sugar
2 oranges

Soften the macaroons in the milk. Beat the eggs well. Add the sugar and grated rind of one orange. Be sure to only use the orange color and none of the white pith. Stir into the macaroons carefully. Add the juice of two oranges. Pour into an oiled mold and simmer in water for one hour. Serve with orange sauce.

ORANGE SAUCE

5 tablespoons of butter
½ cup of sugar
½ cup of boiling water
3 egg whites
Juice of 2 oranges
1½ tablespoons of lemon juice

Cream the butter and sugar. Put into a saucepan over hot water. Add the boiling water. Then add the stiffly beaten egg white. Add the orange juice and lemon juice. Beat until light and foamy.

Scientist Factor In Gown's Glamor

Few women realize that much of the glamor of their evening gowns depends upon the scientist—for recent developments in rayon yarns make possible a variety of formal weaves and textures never before possible.

Employing the finest rayon filaments is a new crepe—so smooth it seems to mirror the rich floral prints in its surface. Also favored for slim, sculptured lines are rayon jerseys with crepe-like drape. These may be had in dull version or with brilliant, satiny surface, and in patterns ranging from lush jungle flowers to striking, modern, black-and-white scrolls.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

RUTH HUTTON, of the Cooper Union art faculty, has raised an ugly ghost of the terrible '20s in some long-distance fashion forecasting she has been doing. There are signs, says Miss Hutton, that designers are attempting to bring back in a modified form the low waistline which "achieved such disrepute" in the jazz era. By various devices, she points out, such as wide draped sashes, colored inserts, etc., the couturiers are "slyly molding the figure below the higher Empire line to restore the lowered waist painlessly."

This, Miss Hutton suggests, is all part of the approaching end of another seven-year cycle in dress. The Baroque vogue with its emphasis upon femininity and ornament will reach its peak of popularity this spring, she predicts, but "must in turn give way to a newer style note." However—not right away. Frills, flowers, veils and curves have a strong hold upon 1938, in fact, perhaps the strongest since that tranquil pre-war year of 1914 when women wore plumed and flowered hats and strolled idly under gay parasols. Apparently the short, full skirt and sculptured torso movement which started early in this decade is just working up to its grand climax.

After that? Well, perhaps we could stand a few less ruffles, some less flamboyant prints and some more classical lines. But the thought of the 1926 silhouette is too terrible to contemplate. Are more large ladies in barrel effects with belts draped over their hips to parade before us? Is there to be another era of public knocked knees and bowed legs? If so, the times call for another Joan of Arc. But—could St. Joan herself combat a fashion cycle?

Mrs. Santa Claus.

MRS. ELLSWORT RICHARDSON, of Ottumwa, Iowa, has announced she will campaign for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate on a platform advocating world peace, freedom, happiness and security. Mrs. Richardson might be pardoned for overlooking lower taxes and a square deal for the underdog in her platform, but it is unthinkable that she should have failed to take an open stand for two permanents a year for every woman, a trade-in on a new car every other year for every man and a pocket radio set for every registered voter.

Bloomer Girls.

AMELIA BLOOMER'S birth anniversary will be celebrated May 28 by present-day women who revere her courage, according to an announcement from Seneca Falls, N. Y. In that town the pioneer feminist created a major sensation when she appeared on the streets in a modified Oriental costume that later received her name.

A lot of water has run under the bridge, sartorically speaking, since the gentle Annies of the fifties were shocked and their stuffy husbands outraged by Mrs. Bloomer's daring. It took a good while for Mrs. Bloomer's fashion suggestion to take hold—even the Bloomer girls of a much later period were decried in genteel circles. But eventually bloomers became the rage. And after them, like a prairie fire, spread the vogue of the pajama, the knicker, the slack and the short, to say nothing of the one-piece bathing suits.

Today a young woman who appeared for sports in bloomers would be considered antediluvian. Even to be seen at an underwear counter buying the pink variety would brand her as a blue nose. Yes, the cycle has been completed. Once again it takes daring to wear bloomers.

Conversation Piece.

MRS. SARAH BRODSKY, 97-year-old mother of a New York magistrate, will show at the New York World's Fair hobby display a bedspread of very intricate pattern. Though only a year old, she took up the art of crochet as a major pursuit.

In this energetic age when grandmothers are constantly enrolling in universities or starting tea shops, there is nothing unusual about Mrs. Brodsky's venture. But it is interesting that she deliberately took up a hobby because she said she was tired of playing bridge with younger women.

One might imagine that she also got tired of hearing interviewers, psychologists and bright, cheery ladies she met at teas constantly saying, "And just what is your hobby, Mrs. Brodsky?"

Today's HEALTH TALK

Synthetic Drugs.

I SAID in a previous article this week that in ancient times doctors had to depend on the drugs they found in nature. As a matter of fact, the word "psychic" in its Greek form means "nature," and those who believe that the treatment of disease by drugs is unnatural and who say, "Throw physic to the dogs" are really saying, "Throw nature to the dogs."

Nowadays, however, with our remarkable knowledge of chemistry, we are able to make drugs in the chemical laboratory that are in many respects far superior to those found in nature. Among the most remarkable achievements in this line has been the production of local anesthetics.

In 1884 Dr. Karl Koller found cocaine, which is obtained in nature from the vegetable kingdom, had remarkable properties in deadening the endings of sensory nerves and was, therefore, a local anesthetic. It had, however, two disadvantages—it was quite toxic and could poison people, sometimes in small doses, and it was habit forming. Synthetic chemists started to discover what particular radicals in the chemical structure of cocaine produced these undesirable by-products, and were able to replace them with other radicals, so that nowadays we have as the favorite local anesthetic, novocaine, which is not habit forming and has practically no toxicity.

Another local anesthetic produced by the synthetic chemists is butyn, which is also non-toxic and non-habit forming.

There is practically no limit to what modern synthetic chemists can do. They rearrange formulae almost at will.

Another artificial series of drugs which have been made entirely by synthetic chemists are the hypnotics, or sleep producers, such as veronal, luminal, medinal. These are all barbituric acid derivatives, and the chemist simply knocks out one radical from the barbituric acid group and puts in another, so that he can produce a compound to fit any requirement.

Paris Designers Offer Costumes For College Proms

Paris (U.P.).—Fully aware that high school and college proms are coming on, a few of the leading Paris couturiers have designed some very chic, very French evening costumes for young teens.

Stunning bolero and full skirts are to be seen everywhere. For the senior dances there is a taffeta bolero, waist-short in front, flaring below the hips in back. It is worn over a finely pleated apple-green taffeta dress. A light pink chiffon bolero is tucked in 3-inch squares and has twin rows of golden daisies down both lapels.

Sixteen-year-old Princess Alexandra of Greece has just bought from Molyneux a long, pale blue, slightly flared velvet dress with a tight-fitting jacket trimmed with rolled braid at the edges. She also ordered an evening frock with yards and yards of transparent tulle in the skirt.

Charming Mlle. Madeleine Ozeray, French actress who at 29 plays juvenile roles, is wearing a full-skirted satin frock with a velvet jacket in her latest play. A starched lace, baby collar is fastened at the neck with a jeweled flower pin. As a rule heavy jewelery is not considered smart for young girls. Paris decrees that perfume also should not be used. Instead, natural flowers are ideal for dress and coiffure.

Long, hooded wraps both in taffeta and velvet are being shown. Coiffures should be very simple for these hoods.

Mrs. Roosevelt Faces A Week of Many Teas

Two to Follow Mrs. Morgenthau's Luncheon Today; First Lady Will Ride Tonight at Fort Myer for Birthday Fund.

According to Mrs. Roosevelt, the news that she has bobbed her hair is greatly exaggerated.

"All I did was have a quarter of an inch cut off the ends at each side," she said yesterday at a press conference. "I did it simply to be able to comb the sides without having to take them down. Will I ever bob my hair? For the present, anyway, the answer is no. I have to ride in too many open cars with the President, and the only device by which I can keep my hat on is to pin the strap in a way which would be impossible with short hair."

The next week will be a crowded one socially for the First Lady. Yesterday she entertained eight or ten children at tea in honor of Chandler and Elliott Roosevelt, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt. Chandler and Elliott will be at the White House for a month while their parents will divide their time between Washington and nearby cities.

Has Luncheons, Tea Engagements

Today Mrs. Roosevelt will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, at her home on Thirtieth street. This afternoon she will entertain at two teas and tonight expects to take part in the Fort Myer Horse Show for the benefit of the President's Birthday Fund. Her Horse, Dot, is suffering from lameness at present, but Mrs. Roosevelt hopes she will be recovered by this evening.

Tomorrow the First Lady is lunching with the group of wives of Foreign Service officials who meet the first Wednesday of every month at the Admiral. Mrs. John Carter Vincent is chairman of the organization. Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain the Women's Club of Roland Park, Md., at tea, and at 6:30 will broadcast for the Red Cross.

On Thursday Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, will give for Mrs. Roosevelt the luncheon which had to be postponed from a week or so ago. That evening the Interdepartmental reception will be held at the White House.

The First Lady may go away this week-end, but has not yet made definite plans. On Monday evening she will wlecome at the White House former Representative Fred Davenport, who will have with him a group of young college students chosen by the Institute of Public Affairs to work for a year in one of the Government agencies in Washington. Earlier in the day she will give two teas at the White House.

Present at Townsend Musicale

Yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt attended Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale, at which Bino Rabinof, violinist, and Beveridge Webster, pianist, were the artists. Guests in the First Lady's box were Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian envoy; Mrs. James Roosevelt and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, jr.

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz and the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, were the ranking guests at the luncheon given after the musicale by Mr. Lawrence Townsend. Mrs. Townsend is still confined to her home with a cold.

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With were also in the diplomatic group at the luncheon, which included the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. V. A. L. Mallet; Witold Wankowicz, Counselor of the Polish Embassy; Frau Herbert Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy; and Rafal Lepkowski and Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. James J. Hughes, Miss Mary Randolph, Miss Moira Archbold, Miss Bertha Rich, Ulysses Grant-Smith, Edward Weintal and John Seger.

Miss Janet Richards also entertained at a luncheon after the musicale. Guest of honor was Mrs. Louis Lombard, of Castle Treveno and New York, who is visiting her, and others present were Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Joseph T. Cecil and Mrs. John B. Clement, of Philadelphia.

Egypt Sends New Aide Here

Mr. Radi Takes Place of Waguih Rostum as Charge.

Although invitations to the reception in celebration of the birthday of King Farouk I at the Egyptian Legation were sent out in the name of Waguih Rostum, Charge d'Affaires ad Interim, he will not be present. By February 11, the date of the party, he will have reached Cairo, where his new job in the foreign office awaits him. Mr. Rostum leaves this week for Egypt and the new Charge d'Affaires, Hussein Mahmoud Radi, arrives in Washington Tuesday or Wednesday of next week to take his place.

This was Mr. Rostum's second stay at the Egyptian Legation in Washington, and he regrets he was just recapturing his use of American slang when duty calls him to Egypt. He has represented his country in almost every capital of Europe, beginning as a student in the diplomatic service according to the Egyptian system, which requires members of its foreign servcie to study special subjects before being accredited to a post after they have been admitted through examinations to this most coveted career.

Aside from his work as a diplomat, Mr. Rostum's keen interest is ancient Egyptian art. Wherever he traveled he did a great deal in connection with museums and private individuals to spread knowledge and encourage research on the paintings and sculptures unearthed in the tombs of the Pharoahs.

He has taken especial interest in the royal wedding because his family have been friends of the King's mother, Queen Nazli. Like her daughter-in-law, the former Sasi Naaz, she came of a fine family, but not of the nobility.

Simmonses Tell Friends Good-by At Houghtelings

The Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling entertained at dinner last evening for 14 guests.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, the latter saying good-by to friends before leaving today for his new post in Canada. Mrs. Simmons and her tiny son, John Farr Simmons, jr., will remain at their Georgetown residence until the end of February. Then they will join Mr. Simmons in Ottawa, where he will serve as counselor of legation.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark J. Lawrence, of Chicago, who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling, were also among the guests last evening.

The former Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Pedro Arcaya, and Mme. Arcaya, will leave Washington Thursday for New York, where they will be met by their daughter, Isabel, a student at Vassar, and their son, Mariano, a Princeton senior. Dr. and Mme. Arcaya will sail Saturday for a visit of two months to their native land.

Rep. and Mrs. Thomason Move Into Apartment

Representative and Mrs. Ewing Thomason, of Texas, have taken an apartment at the Kennedy-Warren for the duration of the Congressional session. With them is their daughter, Miss Isabelle Thomason, who graduated last June from the University of Texas.

De Withs to Give Parties to Observe Birth of Princess

The birth of a daughter to Princess Juliana of Holland will be celebrated here with a reception on Saturday afternoon, at which Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With will be hosts at the legation.

The Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With will leave Thursday for New York, where they will give a reception that afternoon for members of the Dutch colony. That evening there will be a banquet at Holland House which the Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With will attend. They will return to Washington Friday.

Mrs. Leahy's 'At Home' Is Attended by Many

Society decided yesterday one of the nicest ways to begin a week was to visit Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of Rear Admiral Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, at her well-attended "at home."

Assisting Mrs. Leahy were Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. William H. Leahy, daughter-in-law of the hostess; Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson and the wives of Admiral Leahy's aides, Mrs. Louis Denfeld and Mrs. William Freseman.

Will Attend Cotillion

Harris & Ewing.

Joining members of Washington's younger set who will be on hand for the Virginia Cotillion in Alexandria Friday evening is Miss Sally Le Fevre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Le Fevre, of Tracy Place.

Head of Frontier Nurses to Talk

Mrs. Mary Breckinridge Will Reach Capital Feb. 21, Speak on Feb. 24.

Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, founder of the Frontier Nursing Service, will arrive in Washington February 21 for a brief stay. On the afternoon of February 24 she will speak on the Service's work at the Textile Museum of George Hewitt Myers, 2330 S street.

Mrs. Breckinridge, whose father, the late Clifton R. Breckinridge, was Ambasasdor to Russia, has built by her own efforts this service which brings to Kentucky mountain children medical care which they could not otherwise obtain. She founded the organization 12 years ago in memory of her two children who died.

Several members of Capital society have gone to Kentucky as couriers for the Nursing Service, among them Miss Marian Shouse, Miss Katherine Buckley, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Buckley; Miss Christine Ekengren, Mrs. John Pugh, the former Miss Louise Myers and Miss Marguerite Wooley. In their capacity as couriers, these young women help carry patients back and forth on horseback; care for the horses which are used by the nurses for transportation, and generally assist in attending to the sick.

During her stay here Mrs. Breckinridge will stop at the Hay Adams House. She comes to Washington annually from the Kentucky mountains, where she spends most of her time.

Mrs. L. W. Robert Now at Pinehurst, Guest of Tuftses

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., last heard of at Palm Beach, travels considerably faster than even the news about herself and now is at Pinehurst, N. C., where she is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Tufts at their residence, Fairway.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Herbert D. Vail gave a luncheon for Mrs. Robert and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ewing were hosts at a dinner party in her honor. Mr. and Mrs. Tufts entertained at a barbecue for her Saturday.

For her stay at Pinehurst, Mrs. Robert is riding her favorite horse, St. John the Baptist, which she has stabled there for the winter.

Senorita Gonzalez, American Will Wed

Mexican Aide's Sister to Be Bride of Mr. Smith.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Senorita Margarita Gonzalez y Gonzalez, sister of Manuel Gonzalez y Gonzalez, the secretary of the Mexican Embassy, to Richmond Mark Smith, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Birchhoff, of Chicago. Senorita Gonzalez y Gonzalez is the daughter of Senor Vicente Gonzalez y Gonzalez and Senora de Gonzalez y Gonzalez, of Mexico City.

It will be recalled that the bride-elect visited her brother in Washington last summer.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

SENATE GALLERIES were less crowded than usual yesterday as society trekked across the street to the Supreme Court Building and sat mink-deep to hear the newest Supreme Court Justice, Stanley F. Reed, sworn in. Those who knew him "when" crowded the big room and for the first time in months Justice Black took second billing in the judicial show.

To the right of the Justices' platform sat the entire Reed family—Mrs. Reed, Stanley, jr., who is at Harvard Law School, and John Reed, who works for a law firm in New York. Mrs. Reed was simply and smartly dressed in a black frock with a matching peaked hat. Nearby was Mrs. Homer S. Cummings (black hat, mink coat) and further along were James Roosevelt, and his wife (also mink coat, with a small pillbox hat trimmed with the same fur).

DUDLEY HARMON.

The Hollywood Frederic Marches, who were honor guests at a breakfast given Sunday by the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings, were also in the audience yesterday. The actor sat leaning forward tensely, chin in hand, looking as though he had a personal interest in the decisions. Mrs. March, whose professional name is Florence Eldredge, wore a brown tailored suit with a beige blouse and a sports hat in a London tan shade.

* * * *

JOHN ROOSEVELT and his fiancee arrived promptly on time. Miss Clark is even blonder than she looks in her pictures and yesterday wore a navy blue frock with a collar piped in white, a navy blue hat and shoes and a mink coat.

Well to the rear of the room were John L. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis. The Irish Minister and Mrs. MacWhite, who sat next to the Marches, and Robert Woods Bliss were others there. Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark looked smart in a red frock and matching beret. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong—and Miss Kathleen Knox were also among the distinguished spectators.

* * * *

NEWS AND GOSSIP: Mrs. Sydney Colman expects to leave in two or three weeks for Florida or California—she hasn't yet decided which. At present her niece, Mrs. Clifton W. Phillips (Natalie Keeney), is visiting her until tomorrow . . . Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, Naval Attache of the German Embassy, will entertain at a dinner party February 11.

* * * *

NORA DE WITH, daughter of The Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With, was almost stuttering with excitement yesterday afternoon over the news of Princess Juliana's daughter. At Stellita Stapleton's cocktail party, Miss de With said that she and her parents had been waiting for days to hear word of the event. Night before last their chauffeur was sitting up late listening to the radio when he heard the news. Although it was then after 1 o'clock in the morning, he rushed to the Minister's bedroom to wake him and the Minister roused his family.

"Of course everybody hoped for a boy, but we're so happy that the Princess and her baby are doing well, that's all we care about," said Miss de With yesterday.

Miss Stapleton's party was in honor of the much feted Graciela Trucco, whose marriage to Fernando Illanes will take place February 18.

* * * *

The guest of honor was in a brown dress with a green hat, looking rather woodsy. A corsage of orchids completed her costume. Miss Rebeca Trucco (Marta, the third sister, did not appear) poured tea for a while, as did Miss Olga Patterson, who makes her home with the family of the Chilean Ambassador.

"Among those present:" Dolly Corbin, Mrs. George H. Powell, Victor Sutro, Nathan Bartlett, Lieut. Richard Hunt, Frau Thomsen, wife of the German Counselor; Mr. and Mrs. Eric Kunelt—she sails on Saturday for her home in Austria; Benjamin Plunket, Senora de Baron, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and many others.

Doris Fracker, Of Chevy Chase, To Be Married

Western High Graduate Is Engaged to Student at Wisconsin.

Dr. and Mrs. S. B. Fracker, of Chevy Chase, announce the engagement of their daughter, Doris Margaret, to Willis E. Hoard, of Kenosha, Wis.

Miss Fracker, a graduate of Western High School, attended American University for two years and now is a senior at the University of Wisconsin. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and also of Alpha Kappa Delta, honorary sociological fraternity.

Mr. Hoard is the son of F. E. Hoard, of Kenosha, and a cousin of former Gov. Hoard. He is a graduate of Beloit College, a member of Sigma Pi and Gamma Eta Gamma and a senior in the law school of the University of Wisconsin.

Planning to make their home temporarily at 831 Twenty-first street south in Arlington, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gilmer Steele were married last Saturday in the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Alexandria, the Rev. G. S. Vest officiating. Members of the families and a few intimate friends attended. Mrs. Steele is the former Miss Frederita Bernice Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnston, jr., of Aurora Hills.

The bride wore a costume of aquamarine crepe and a black velvet bonnet trimmed with a short face veil. Her corsage bouquet was of gardenias. Mrs. William Rodes, of Washington, matron of honor and only attendant of the bride, wore maroon velvet with matching accessories. Her shoulder corsage was also of gardenias. William Rodes was best man.

The bridegroom is a student at the University of Maryland, while the bride is a graduate of the high school at Grove City, Pa., where her parents formerly lived.

Parties to See Dance Recital

Miss Davis Receives Later to Present Friends to Artists.

Many parties are being given at the recital which Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman will present at the Roosevelt High School auditorium this evening under auspices of the Washington Dance Association.

Among those entertaining guests are the Attache of the Venezuelan Legation and Senora de Lecuna, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Hatch, Bray Hammond, who is having Representative and Mrs. Paul R. Geever in his party; Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. David L. Wing, George Ross, the director of the Corcoran School of Art and Mrs. Richard Lahey, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Miss Faith Williams and Miss Eleanor Fahey.

Members of the faculty and students from the Madeira School, Holton Arms, National Cathedral School for Girls, Mount Vernon Seminary, King-Smith and Arlington Hall are attending, as are groups from the Marjorie Webster School, American, George Washington and Maryland universities and Trinity, Gallaudet and Wilson Teachers colleges.

Smart Crowd Sees Lonsdale Play Premiere

Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick Give Party for Producer and Wife.

As smart a turnout as Washington has seen this season showed up at the National Theater last evening for the premiere of Frederick Lonsdale's latest play, "Once Is Enough," starring Ina Claire.

The fact that Mr. and Mrs. C. Matthews Dick were giving a supper party after the performance was partly responsible for the chic of last evening's gathering. The Dick party was in honor of Producer Gilbert Miller and Mrs. Miller, who have been entertained frequently in past visits here. Mrs. Miller is the daughter of Jules Bache, New York financier, who recently gave his home and its art treasures to the city as a museum.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick came to the theater last evening in a party with the Albert Deweys—Mrs. Dewey wearing a black gown with a ruby clip and a cape of silver fox.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, was in the audience last evening. Yesterday he gave a tea in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Mario Panza, who were guests of the Prince del Drago, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy. The latter was at the theater last evening in a party which included Countess Roberti, of the Italian Embassy, and her sister, Mrs. Hugh Fenwick, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse were accompanied by the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims. They were among those who attended the Dicks' party later.

Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, wore last evening a long red cloak, most becoming with her blonde hair. She was with several friends, including Miss Irene Boyle and Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios were glimpsed during the entr'acte chatting with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Arthur Krock.

Miss Nora de With was accompanied by Lieut. Richard Hunt, and nearby sat Miss Laura Tuckerman with Dorsey Fischer, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, who was escorted by Clarence Hewes, wore a blue fox wrap over her gown and a corsage of orchids.

Others glimpsed last evening were the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet; the Counselor of The Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg; Mrs. S. Kent Legare, who wore a brief ermine jacket over her black frock; Mr. and Mrs. E. Mrs. Hughes Is Elected By Y.W.C.A.

Chosen for Nominating Committee From Membership.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States, was elected a member of the nominating committee of the Y. W. C. A. last night at the annual meeting held in the Administration Building, Seventeenth and K streets.

Others serving with Mrs. Hughes, who was elected from the general membership, are Mrs. Fred E. Wright, also from the membership; Mrs. Arthur L. Brandon, Miss Grace Johnson and Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, all members of the present board.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, wife of the newest Justice of the Supreme Court, is recording secretary of the Y. W. C. A. but her place was filled last night by Dr. Anne Seesholtz, chairman of the religious life committee, who read Mrs. Reed's report.

New directors included Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. William Lee Corbin, present president; Miss Margaret R. Fox, who is now treasurer; Mrs. Harold G. Moulton, Mrs. David A. Skinner and Miss Jessie Smith.

Progress Reviewed In Dramatic Skits

Ten years of progress at the Y. W. C. A. were reviewed in dramatized form by each department, presented as the report of the general secretary, Miss Hettie P. Anderson. Scenes were accompanied by a dialogue between "Miss 1927," played by Miss Grace Johnson of the board of directors, and "Miss 1937," by Miss Elizabeth Morrow, also of the board.

Miss Virginia Sholar, recreation secretary, was in charge of the dramatization.

Activities at Strong Residence were portrayed by a group of girls who live there. In the group were Caroline Peters, Catherine Grabb, Pauline Whitten, Mildred Ledner, Jane Mastonardy, Cleo Warren and Garland Brown, who came with her bicycle. They made their entrance as girls applying for residence at the house, some bringing much baggage, some little, and, as a group, illustrating the varied interests represented among members of the Strong Residence "family."

The Vacation Lodge girls also showed a wide variety of activities, among them gardening, which is popular with the girls there during the summer, and outdoor sports. Miss Viola McKay presented a striking picture as the ski girl, in a white ski suit. Jeannie Aumiller and Wanda Lee Davis were among gardeners who came bearing hoes and rakes.

The E Street Y. W. C. A. was represented by a skit in which Mrs. James Anderson and Miss Katherine Wilfrey took part.

"Employment in a Utopia," an entertaining skit by the girls of the Industrial-Nationalities group, had in the cast Mary Castoni, Marion Connor, Betty Stanthoes, Mrs. Charles Demos and Mrs. S. Baboshian.

The Kamp Kahlert scene was under direction of Miss Amy Veerhoff, and was built around the theme of the "great oak" at the camp.

The music department contended itself with statistics, displaying a chart on which a small piano and a large one contrasted its membership now and ten years ago. Miss Mary Burnett is director of music for the Y. W. C. A.

Blue Triangle Received Attention

The Blue Triangle Club, which was the newest club within the Business and Professional Women's department in 1927, and now one of its foremost groups, was featured in its presentation. Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, one of the charter members, discussed the club as it was then. Others in the skit were Edith Lawson, Mrs. Mae Embrey, Miss McKay, Margaret Cragg, Jean Carr, Mary Putnam, Catherine Richardson, Mildred Ladner, Virginia Guthrie and Elizabeth Burner.

The purpose of the "Y. W." was the background for the program and as stated there was: "To build a fellowship of women and girls devoted to the task of realizing in our common life those ideals of personal and social living to which we are committed by our faith as Christians. In this endeavor we seek to understand Jesus, to share his love for all people, and to grow in the knowledge and love of God."

Miss Sara Motley, chairman of tellers for the election, was assisted by Miss Edna Selander, Miss Edith Wagonseller, Miss Frances Bassist, Miss Mary Ensore, Miss Martha Stroh, Miss Virginia Loveland and Mrs. Eldred Dickinson.

Polish National Group Will Meet Tomorrow

The February meeting of the Polish National Club of Washington will be held at Stansbury Hall, 5832 Georgia avenue northwest, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Plans for the Valentine dance and the Polish Constitution Day celebration will be discussed.

League of Women Voters Studies Relief

Harris & Ewing.

The relief situation in Washington is having the light of impartial investigation turned on it by the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters. Mrs. David Cushman Coyle (center) and her committee met yesterday at the Smorgesbord to discuss their findings. With her are Mrs. Jack Levin (left) and Mrs. E. E. Vial, among those in the group.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

FIVE NEW MEMBERS have been added to the board of the Washington Club and, with these holding over from the past year, will meet Thursday to elect new officers. Both the president, Mrs. Willard Hayes, and the first vice president, Miss Grace Burton, have completed their terms and are ineligible for re-election.

The new board members are Mrs. William M. Mann, Mrs. Albert Pike, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Mrs. Clyde Fitch Kelley and Mrs. Alfred E. Fowler.

This morning Robert Lincoln O'Brien will address the club on "Trends in Newspapers."

CHRISTINE GAWNE, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. J. O. Gawne, has been elected president of the Girl Scout Leaders Association of the Washington Council, succeeding Mrs. Robert Laughlin. She is a graduate of Katharine Gibbs School in New York and is a member of the Junior League.

The Leaders Association is an organization of more than 200 of those honored are recorded by the organization.

group leaders of the Girl Scouts in the District. A study of the leaders by the local training committee shows 60 per cent of them are housewives; 15 per cent secretaries, 10 per cent teachers, and others students, social workers and nurses. Mrs. O. G. Hankins is chairman of the training committee.

There are 2,557 girls organized in small troops throughout the city.

Other officers of the Leaders Association are: Mrs. Joseph Evans, vice president; Mrs. J. T. Onley, secretary and treasurer. Representatives elected to the council committees are: Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, representative to the Girl Scout program committee; Mrs. Joseph Kurz, representative to the Girl Scout camp committee, and Mrs. J. Party Is Given By Republican League Women

Mrs. Grimes Chairman of Affair at the Sulgrave Club.

The League of Republican Women yesterday afternoon sponsored a large bridge party in the Sulgrave Club proceeds of which swelled the club's fund by $460. Mrs. George Madden Grimes was chairman of the succesful affair, assisted by Miss Ellen Corbett.

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the league, headed the list of patronesses. As she does not play cards, she came in at the end of the afternoon and received the players as her guests at tea, after they had finished their games. She wore a black tailored dress with a hair-line stripe of white, a black turban and a corsage of white violets.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Wallace White and Mrs. Warren R. Austin. The table was lighted with white candles and had a low, spreading bouquet of yellow, pink and white snapdragons and lavendar tulips as a centerpiece.

Miss Corbett was assisted by Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker in handling the tickets as the guests arrived in the early afternoon, and Mrs. Anna Scott, secretary for the league, distributed the programs listing the events for the month of February. Another important affair on the calendar this week is tomorrow afternoon's tea at the clubhouse on Seventeenth street at which a large group of the congressional women will be present.

The league is adding new members steadily and maintaining an active schedule. The bridge yesterday is the second it has held, the first one having been given early in the season.

Among the guests yesterday were all of the vice presidents, Mrs. Grimes, Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mrs. Warren R. Haines, Mrs. William S. Doak, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, and Mrs. Charles M. Lea, also Mrs. Chandler Hale, chairman of patronesses; Miss Daisy M. Prentiss, Mrs. Hugh Southworth, Mrs. Frisby Elker, Mrs. G. Louis Weller, Mrs. James Watson, Mrs. J. J. Dempsey, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Mrs. William Morton Grinnell, treasurer of the league; Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and Mrs. E. A. Harriman, both past presidents; Miss Clara McQuown, noted lecturer; Miss Edna Patton and Mrs. Wilson Compton.

Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong also was among the guests and was surrounded by friends glad to see her able to be out again. Another guest was Mrs. Maud Cudworth, of Wisconsin, prominent in the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Gold Star Mothers and other patriotic organizations as well as an active member of the Republican Party in her State.

Mr. Jones Here For City Club

The Women's City Club will have as its guest speaker tomorrow Hamilton Jones, lecturer, traveler and amateur photographer, who will show color motion pictures of the Rocky Mountains.

Mr. Jones' picture was adjudged by the Amateur Cinema League of New York to be the best nontheatrical film taken in 1937. It was also awarded the Hiram Percy Maxim bronze plaque as the most excellent picture in a competitive field of over 2,000.

Members of the club and their guests have been invited to attend this program, at 9 p. m., immediately following their regular meeting.

Mrs. John M. Waters, chairman of the travel section, is in charge of arrangements. Assisting her are: Miss Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Gus A. Schuldt, Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mrs. Thomas A. Sherman, Judge Mary O'Toole, Mrs. Frank A. Birgfeld, Mrs. Raymond H. Keller, Mrs. Nadine Gallaher, Mrs. William Lee Corbin, Mrs. Caroline Stephen, Mrs. Caroline Stephen, Mrs. Julia Benton Hopkins, Mrs. Dorothy K. Butler, Mrs. Agnes G. Newman, Miss Roberta Tull, Mrs. Mabel Raymond, Mrs. Gertrude LeLacheur.

The regular monthly session of the Marietta Park Women's Club will meet at the home of Miss Olive Long, 300 Rittenhouse street, this evening at 8 with the program in charge of Miss Long, as civic chairman.

Club Federation President Tells Of Difficulties in Montreal

Mrs. Roberta Lawson Returns Here After Speaking Before American Woman's Club in Canadian City.

The privilege of sitting in on the board of education and having some say in educational policies of city schools is the immediate concern of the Montreal Woman's Club, according to Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who has just returned from Canada. She addressed the American Woman's Club in Montreal last Wednesday night and was guest of honor at a banquet given by the Montreal Woman's Club, which includes women of both United States and Canada in its membership.

Efforts of the women to obtain a voice in school affairs is meeting with some opposition, according to Mrs. Lawson, who was told the mayor of the city had ignored a resolution of the club, stating the position of its members and that he stated he believed women's place was "back in the kitchen."

The federation president expressed the wish she would stay there and help the Montreal women. They are already responsible for a public playground program, initiated in 1927.

She talked to them on a variety of subjects and especially urged study of treaties—a project sponsored by the federatoin this year—as an aid to international understanding. The American Women's Club has been active in social welfare work and has interested itself in Americans enrolled in Canadian colleges, she says.

On her way back to Washington, she conferred in New York with Mrs. William Dick Sporborg on a plan for a campaign of wise spending among women of the Nation. They decided on speakers for radio programs which will soon be announced. The campaign is to continue over a period of three months at the most, Mrs. Lawson said yesterday.

She leaves today for Shelbyville, Ky., where she will visit her sister-in-law, Miss Bessie Lawson, and will go from there to Louisville, where Mrs. E. H. Heller, past State president and a director of the General Federation, is entertaining at a luncheon for her, with presidents of Louisville clubs as guests.

She will return to the Capital and prepare for a meeting of the resolutions committee which will outline resolutions to be presented to the triennial convention in Kansas City in May. If club business permits, Mrs. Lawson plans to go to Tucson, Ariz., later, to join friends whom she has visited for each of the past ten years.

Greenbelt Rent Is Expected to Remain Same

To Rise Only if Citizens Ask Added Expenditure, Manager Says.

Residents of Greenbelt, Md., will not be required to pay higher rents unless they demand expenditures above those now contemplated, they were told at the model community's first annual budget hearing last night.

Town Manager Roy S. Braden told the more than 100 Greenbelters attending the hearing that the present estimated budget total of $61,813 would involve no increase in present rents, though previously it had been reported that a large portion of the total would be met by proration of a rent rise.

The Farm Security Administration, Government agency controlling policies at Greenbelt, will be asked to contribute $57,537 to the community's upkeep. The administration collects rents at Greenbelt and from them makes deductions to cover amortization of its investment and the cost of community facilities such as lighting, police and fire protection, Braden explained.

$1,476 in Taxes Expected.

The community, Braden said, expects to raise $1,476 in direct taxes to be levied against personal property of residents—household furnishings, automobiles, etc—and against approximately 600 acres of privately owned land within the town's limits.

The proposal to tax Greenbelt landowners brought an outburst of protest from some of the residents attending the hearing. Braden said the contemplated rate was $1.80 per hundred which, the opponents pointed out, would bring the property tax rate in the community to $3.25 per hundred with a State-county tax of $1.45.

Braden replied that landowners have been benefited by increase in property values in addition to improved school facilities and police and fire protection.

Police Chief Debated.

One of the residents protested hiring a police chief for the community at an annual salary of $2,400, but Braden pointed out that the chief would also function as town fire chief and electrician.

Because Braden has been ill, the budget has not been prepared for approval. It will be resubmitted to the mayor and town council at a meeting February 28.

Since most of the land at Greenbelt is owned by the Government, taxes must be levied against personal property, Braden explained. He estimated there are $22,000 worth of automobiles and $40,000 worth of household furnishings at Greenbelt.

Braden said he also expected to raise $2,000 through the State roads commisison and $800 from "miscellaneous" sources.

Missing Student At G. W. Located

Charles E. Hoffman, 20-year-old George Washington University student who disappeared from Mount Rainier, Md., January 15, was located yesterday in Miami.

A telegram was received yesterday from the youth asking that money be sent to him for his fare back home.

Police learned the boy's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bridges, who came here with him so that he might go to college, returned to their home in Paul City, Okla., after they received a farewell note from the boy which indicated he intended taking his life.

The telegram was forwarded to the Western city.

Mrs. Wilson Dead At Arlington Home

Mrs. Martha I. Wilson, widow of Edward A. Wilson and a resident of Arlington County for 27 years, died last night in her home at 905 Jackson street, Clarendon, after a long illness.

She was a daughter of Bradford B. Huchins, a direct descendant of Gov. William Bradford of Massachusetts. She was born at Indian Lake, N. Y., in August, 1858.

Since coming to Arlington County she had been active in the affairs of the Clarendon Methodist Episcopal Church whose pastor, the Rev. G. G. Oliver, will conduct the funeral services in her home tomorrow morning. She will be buried in Columbia Garden Cemetery.

Surviving are her daughters, Mrs. C. W. Hunt and Mrs. C. E. Sevenson, and a son, Arthur E. Wilson, all of Arlington County; a brother, Charles A. Hutchins, of North Creek, N. Y., and a niece, Mrs. W. H. Roberts, also of Arlington County.

Adm. Grayson's Brother Succumbs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31.—John Cooke Grayson, brother of Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, died here this morning in the University of Virginia hospital. He was 68.

Son of the late Dr. John Cooke Grayson and Adelena Pettus Grayson, he was born at Salubria, Culpeper County, Va. He married Miss Jennie Thornley, daughter of a prominent physician, of this city.

Besides his wife and brother, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Louis Johnson and Miss Julia Grayson, who made their home with their mother at Seminole Lodge, near Red Hill, Va.

Private funeral services will be held in Charlottesville.

Col. Laurin L. Lawson Funeral Set for Today

Funeral services for Col. Laurin L. Lawson, Field Artillery, U. S. Army, who died Friday of a heart attack while on leave from his station with the Organized Reserves at Fort Bragg, N. C., will be held at 2 p. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Relief

Hospital for some treatment; his wife was sent to the birth control clinic. She had given birth to 12 babies and is only 36 or 37 years old. As soon as there is any room in the vocational training institutions, Mr. B. will be trained for some kind of job.

"The next time I went to visit the B. family the house was warm, the little children were playing around a bushel of potatoes, and there was a great sack of corn meal on the kitchen table. The house was neat and clean. Mrs. B. was eternally grateful. But if Mr. B. had not had the good fortune to have high blood pressure, nothing could have been done for him!

"In the District, it's a wonderful thing if your husband deserts you because then you are an ADA (aid for dependent children) case; and it's a matter of joy if you have heart trouble or high blood pressure, because then you are an 'unemployable;' you can be glad if you lose an arm or a leg, because then you can be taken care of under the vocational rehabilitation program. But if you're a normal American citizen looking for a job—God help you!"

Fay Weissberg reported on the case of R. B., a barber with a wife and two children, aged 5 years and 9 months.

"Mr. B is a barber but is unable to work full time due to chronic arthritis," she said. "Wife is unable to work because of the children. Mr. B is employed two days a week, earns $2 per day. Cannot stand on his feet and has to cut hair in a sitting position, which hinders his efficiency. He had been under medical care for some time, but was discharged from clinic as being employable in June. Since that time his condition has again become bad. He could have steady work if he had strength and health.

"Although Mr. B is temporarily unemployable he can receive no relief. As long as he works his condition becomes worse. If he could stop work completely for a while, his condition might be cured, or at least diminished."

Mrs. F. Norman Hearn told of an elderly colored woman who said she had not eaten a piece of bread in three months and couldn't remember when she had her last piece of meat.

"She had subsisted for the past year entirely on the surplus food orders which the relief workers had given her," Mrs. Hearn said, "and she said that in the past month they (the surplus foods department) have had hardly anything but prunes.

"So prunes have composed her menu for breakfast, dinner and supper. Just prunes! She said she had eaten so many of them that now they made her sick. She could not work because she had a bad heart, and she couldn't receive old-age compensation because she did not know where or when she was born."

Mrs. Hearn said she was convinced that poverty and crime go hand in hand.

"I am now convinced," she said, "that a very great percentage of crimes which are perpetrated today are done so in desperation and as a last resort after all honest means of gaining a living have failed. I have not had to take the word of any welfare worker, or rely on newspaper articles for my information. I have talked personally with some of these unfortunates, people who are hungry, who have forgotten what a square meal is really like, who are cold, ill, discouraged and slowly are becoming completely demoralized.

"I began my interviewing with an open and somewhat skeptical mind concerning the status of the relief question, but now, after my own personal contact with the situation, I am fully convinced that immediate action of some kind must be taken to alleviate it. The poverty is at hand, and crime is slowly and ever increasingly following in its path."

Maree Randall said that there were two main classes of relief applicants—those who can be helped and those who cannot.

"The relief applicants who are eligible for assistance fit rather naturally into a preconceived pattern of normal dependency," she said. "They are the sick, or the aged or little children, and we expect them to need looking after.

"But when a strong, healthy, useful, employable man or woman has exhausted every resource for subsistence after weeks of fruitless search for work, he comes to the relief agency as a last resort. Only then does the interviewer feel the bitter irony of the situation which denies help to that person, who is just as hungry, just as cold, just as helpless, but potentially much more of an asset.

"It seems criminally shortsighted to withhold help until the applicant has become a qualified public responsibility because of broken health, or mental deterioration, or, worse, has become an apprehended law-breaker."

Mrs. E. E. Vial reported on the case of a young man, father of three children, who became so desperate that he stole a purse in a doctor's office to buy food for his family. The doctor, on being told of the circumstances, refused to prosecute, with the result that the family was just where it had been before.

Mrs. Walter S. Ufford told of a young colored man who, being out of work, sat at his window watching the buses go by. He told her, Mrs. Ufford said, that he often thought of throwing himself in front of a bus so that his family might get aid.

In a preliminary report of the findings of her group, Mrs. Coyle said that of 521 persons who had been denied relief, 116 adults were born in the District and only 115 had come here since 1932. Seventy-eight per cent, she said, had been living here for more than five years.

"One of the most alarming facts brought to light in the survey," Mrs. Coyle said, "was the great number of new applicants for relief. Ninety-three of those applying had never asked for relief before 1937.

"Of the adult members of the group, 346 were unskilled and only 54 skilled. Most of the skilled group were too old to work at their trade. Thirty-eight per cent of the men had worked in the building industry. Forty-eight out of 521 were less than 20 years of age and had had no experience worth mentioning. Almost half of the adults were under 30."

2,000 at Funeral Of Rep. Kenney

Fairview, N. J., Jan. 31 (AP).—More than 2,000 persons braved a driving rainstorm today at attend the funeral of Representative Edward A. Kenney, killed in a fall from the sixth floor of a Washington hotel.

Only 900 were able to get into St. John the Baptist Roman Catholic Church, and the others lined streets as the cortege marched for more than a mile from the Kenney home. The body will be taken to Clinton, Mass., tomorrow by train for burial at St. John's Cemetery, near Kenney's birthplace.

Capt. Edward Sykes, 52, Expires in San Diego

A native of Spencer, Mass., he served here in the office of the Surgeon General from 1920 to 1924 and again from 1929 until 1933.

Capt. Sykes enlisted in the Army in 1904 and was commissioned a first lieutenant on December 11, 1917. He rose to captain during the World War and reverted to his permanent rank of first lieutenant in 1920.

He is survived by his son, Edward D. Sykes, jr., of San Diego.

'Street Monster' Sought in Mobile

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Dusky residents of Mobile's colored district organized new patrols tonight to seek the "Monster of Marmotte Street."

Latest report of the eerie creature's presence threw a church congregation into virtual panic tonight. A woman attending the service left the building, rushed back a few moments later screaming that the monster was at the church door.

Men and women forsook their pews and prayers to bar the door. The preacher, braver than his trembling flock, peeped through a side window to find his pet dog scratching at the door. The new "dark town" patrols, however, believed that a creature from another world was in their midst and continued to guard their homes with shotguns, razors and clubs.

Hatchet Killer Sentenced.

Lockport, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice William A. Gold today sentenced Warren Hyland, 36, North Tonawanda salesman, to serve 20 years to life in Attica Prison for the hatchet killing of his mother.

Clarify Policies For Business, U.S. Is Urged

Brookings Vice President Says Anti-Trust, Price Statements Needed.

York, Jan. 31.—Leverett S Lyon, executive vice president of the Brookings Institution at Washington, said today "one outstanding need in present relationships of Government and business is clarification of Government policy."

Addressing the National Retail Dry Goods Association convention, Dr. Lyon said the Government "has a duty under law to attack monopoly and keep competition open, but it also has a duty . . . to have a definite policy, which is announced, which is pursued and which is clearly stated."

"In connection with the anti-monopoly laws, I believe there is a crying need for a clear statement as to what administration of the anti-trust laws is intended . . .

"Another matter in which clarification is needed has to do with prices. The fiscal and monetary situation in this country is now such that Government action with reference to prices is of primary importance. There is much concern as to what Government will do regarding prices and what the direction of its action will be.

"The deflation of the dollar, the increase in wage rates under NRA, the agricultural adjustment act—all the policies of four years ago were policies looking toward the increase of prices . . .

"But more recently official moves have been in the other direction. Federal Reserve action has been taken to check rising prices. Business is attacked as holding prices too high . . .

"In an atmosphere of uncertainty regarding prices, or the actions which Government will take to increase or depress them, business hesitates and is ineffective."

Dr. Lyon said he looked "hopefully" at the newly revitalized business council" which conferred recently with President Roosevelt at the White House.

"We need in America," he said, "a re-thinking of the areas in which the system of private enterprise may best be employed. Insofar as it is employed we need a new understanding of what is necessary to make that business system work in the public interest."

Groner Condemns Secret Price Order

The Bituminous Coal Commission's fixing of minimum prices for coal without holding formal open hearings at which interested parties can be present and offer testimony, was criticized by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

Justice Groner is the presiding officer of a three-judge tribunal that is hearing the request of the Indiana Gas and Chemical Co., of Terre Haute, Ind., for a suspension of the minimum price orders fixed by the Commission. Associate Justices Peyton Gordon and Oscar R. Luhring of the District Court are sitting with him.

"The use of confidential information in secret meetings without the interested parties having a chance to be heard is not provided for by any law I ever heard of, and the practise contradicts our theory of government," Justice Groner remarked.

John Carson, consumer's counsel under the coal act, testified he had vainly tried to induce the commission to hold public hearings.

Moley Talks Tonight On Politics and Crime

Raymond Moley will speak at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Wardman Park Theater in the fourteenth of a series of 28 crime clinics under auspices of the Institute of Criminal Science. His subject will be "Politics and Crime."

The panel for discussion will include Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney for the District of Columbia; Nugent Dodd, attorney, and Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times.

Cafes Failing in Health Test Denied Their Liquor Permits

500 or More Bacteria on Eating Utensils Rules Them Out; Control Board in Last-Minute Rush.

Patrons of some local restaurants may miss their usual "eye-openers" and "pick-me-ups" today, because the proprietors allowed too many bacteria to accumulate on eating utensils.

"Yes, sir," stated Dr. R. R. Ashworth, head of the Food Inspection Division of the Health Department, "these restaurant owners who are required to obtain their alcohol licenses first have to have a clean bill of health from my department."

500 Is Too Many.

In the last-minute rush yesterday at the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board headquarters in the District Building, many of the waiting hundreds had been held up because they had not obeyed Dr. Ashworth's edict. If his tests show 500 bacteria or more on spoons, forks, glasses, etc., "you can't get your license. And we are backed up by the board, too," he said.

Benjamin Perchick, who operates a grocery store at 1520 North Capitol street, arrived yesterday bright and early to receive his license, and bemoaned the fact that "I left it until the last minute." James, better known as "Jimmie," Lake turned up in line, too.

400 in Class "A."

All of the holders of class "A" licenses, the most coveted type of license issued by the ABC board, have received their permits to dispense packaged spirits. There are now 400 holders of this classification.

Besides passing the rigid Health Department tests, holders of licenses must comply with the plumbing inspector, building inspector, tax office, business privilege tax and Police Department regulations. The ABC board remained open until 9 p. m. last night, four and one-half hours after its regular closing time. It was estimated that 40 out of the estimated 1,787 license holders would not have their licenses reissued.

Girdler Offers Peace Program For Industry

Calls for Co-operation of Employer and Worker, Protection of Both.

By the Associated Press.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 31.—Tom M. Girdler, spokesman for "Little Steel" in its successful battle against John L. Lewis' unionization drive a few months ago, called tonight for co-operation between industry and Government and between employers and employes to establish industrial peace in the United States.

Saying industrial peace was "one of the great necessities if we are to have any true stability or prosperity," the chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, who recently conferred with President Roosevelt, described in an address before the Carolina political union of the University of North Carolina, what he called "four pillars" upon which he believed such a peace could be built:

1. Recognition of the principle of collective bargaining.

2. Recognition of the right of employes to join or not to join any organization of their own choosing, free from coercion—from any source.

3. Recognition that industrial relations are "human relations and that co-operation between men and management and mutual understanding of each other's problems are both possible and essential.

4. Legislation which will fairly protect the rights of both employes and employers.

"We cannot legislate industrial peace in this country," he told the nonpolitical student organization, "but in the Wagner bill we came dangerously near legislating the country into industrial warfare."

Law Loopholes In Maryland Hit By Psychiatrist

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Loopholes in Maryland laws permitting a criminal to win freedom on ground of "temporary" insanity drew sharp criticism today from the official psychiatrist of the supreme bench of Baltimore City.

Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, chief medical officer of the court, described the present law as "totally illogical" in his biennial report for 1936 and 1937, and recommended appointment of a commission to study and propose corrective legislation.

Dr. Guttmacher asserted legal psychiatry has been brought into "ill repute" because of the "private partisan employment of psychiatric experts"

Jones & Laughlin Will 'Share Work'

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation today announced a "share-the-work" plan for all salaried employes, including executives, by which they would take "one-sixth time off, with corresponding salary reductions."

The corporation said the new working schedule became necessary because of the "continued recession in business." It affects some 2,000 employes in the company's three plants in and near Pittsburgh and becomes operative tomorrow.

The announcement followed by a few days a similar plan for "white collar" workers of the United States Steel Corporation.

Textile Wages Cut.

Portland, Me., Jan. 31 (AP).—Wage reductions of 12½ per cent were announced tonight by six Maine cotton textile mills and one Massachusetts manufacturer. Several thousand employes of the York, Edwards, Bates, Hill, Androscoggin and Pepperell companies in Maine and the Fisher Manufacturing Co. at Fisherville, Mass., were affected. Falling market prices were blamed.

Dorothy LaRoe Finally Regains Consciousness

Dorothy LaRoe, daughter of Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board, who was injured in an automobile crash a week ago, recovered consciousness for the first time last night, her father said. She recognized her parents at Emergency Hospital, where she is under treatment.

Dave Crocker, of Frankfort, Del., and Jack Linden, of Washington, the driver, also were injured and are at Emergency. The three, with another girl, were returning from the Woodrow Wilson High School senior prom early Wednesday.

Driver Is Slain, Girl Assaulted On Side Road

Colored Man Is Sought in Killing at Portsmouth Va. County Club.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Va., Jan 31.—Norfolk County and city police were engaged in an intensive search for a colored man who shot to death Cecil V. Sivills, 30, a navy yard worker, of this city, and criminally attacked his girl companion near Glenshellah on the outskirts of the city late last night.

The girl made her way to a residence in Glenshellah where she reported the affair. The girl was sent to a local hospital. She suffered bruises on her limbs and body.

The girl described the slayer-assailant as wearing an overall jumper, a dirty cap and wearing dark goggles. She told police that she and Sivills were parked, on a side road in Glenshellah last night when the man approached the car, drew a gun and demanded money.

The girl told County Officer J. W. Rountree that Sivills told the man he had no money, having just spent his last dollar for gasoline. The man then ordered them from the car, the girl said, forcer them to walk across the golf links of the Portsmouth Country Club to asecluded spot where he shot Sivills and then criminally attacked her.

A hospital report indicated the girl had been assulted.

HE SELLS TOBACCO TO THEM ALL

But Branch Bobbitt, like so many other independent experts, prefers Luckies...

"AT AUCTIONS in my warehouse in Farmville, North Carolina," says Mr. Branch Bobbitt, "Lucky Strike buyers know what tobacco they want and they'll keep bidding right up until they get it.

"Well—in a cigarette—it's the tobacco that counts. I know tobacco and I know what tobacco is in what cigarettes. So that's one reason I've smoked Luckies for over five years now."

Many other experts agree with Mr. Bobbitt. Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all the other cigarettes combined.

HAVE YOU HEARD "THE CHANT OF THE TOBACCO AUCTIONEER" ON THE RADIO? When you do, remember that Luckies use the finest tobacco. And also that the "Toasting" Process removes certain harsh irritants found in all tobacco. So Luckies are kind to your throat.

Organs Living in Glass, Linked By Tubes, Test Drugs on Heart

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.—A live heart and lung, connected by a maze of rubber tubing, throbbed tonight in an experiment University of Minnesota scientists said might reveal a successful treatment for some heart ailments.

Dr. Maurice Visscher, head of the department of physiology, said two drugs tested so far have proved 20 times as effective in laboratory work on animals as any known method. The benefits to humans, who now get relief most commonly from an age-old prescription of digitalis, will not be known for at least another year.

The heart was taken from an animal and, while still functioning was placed in a glass cage and immersed in a water bath to assure uniform temperature.

Living lungs were prepared the same way and hooked to glass and rubber tubing, simulating the circulatory system of the animal's body. The lungs' only function is to furnish oxygen from a tank for the heart to burn.

Medical research men studied the input and output of the living organs and then injected various drugs into blood flowing through glass and rubber "veins" of the robot. They charted the fluctuations. Some drugs had a poisonous effect and slowed the action.

Most hearts and lungs live 24 hours in the metabolism measurement device. Others fail in a short while.

The two most successful drugs which proved themselves 20 times as efficacious in relation to toxicity as anything yet known are compounded in Switzerland. Their composition has been kept secret until their worth is proven.

By . . . HARLAN MILLER

"Lost children will be taken to the Lion House."

Most of 'em would prefer that to the Senate.

* * * *

Mrs. Henry Wallace.

To about 2,000,000 tourists who visit Washington every year, the Zoo probably remains the most vivid memory . . . Even Senator Borah meditates occasionally in front of the cages . . . The bears never visit the Hill, though.

* * * *

Greatest spectacle is the feeding of the lions, tigers and leopards at 1:30 daily, except Sunday. They get big chunks of liver once a week, for the vitamins and the laxative

In fashionable anti-Roosevelt circles the gossip is that the protean Tommy Corcoran is now helping Justice Black with his home work . . . And a Justice has plenty of home work.

That would put The Cork's fighting Irish vocabulary into the marble temple of justice as well as the White House—not to mention into the Capitol occasionally via a heart-to-heart talk with a lawmaker.

Or into all three branches of the Government—executive, judicial and legislative.

* * * *

"—some nap, others box."

After lunch the big lioness nearest the door likes to lie down flat on her back, with her paws in the air, like some of the older Senators on the cloakroom couches.

* * * *

In another cage two full-grown lionesses, mother and daughter, lie down on their sides facing each other, paws interlaced, for a bit of shut-eye . . . At mealtime, though, matron and deb must be separated; mama has a weakness for snatching daughter's steak.

* * * *

Love interest is provided by the two tiger sweethearts, a male and female, which occupy a central cage . . . Unlike other big cats, they do not need to be separated at mealtime; the male does not snatch his mate's T-bones, but watches her eat with loving eyes, after he has finished. He eats faster.

Senator Borah.

Occasionally the two great lovers rear up on their hind legs to their full height and box a little, with playful love-pats, like two Southern Senators massaging each other orally during a filibuster.

* * * *

Most pathetic sight in the Zoo is the lean, mangy, nervous, maned wolf, caged between a lioness and a black leopard, like a Republican caged between two New Dealers. This wolf gets his food cut up in small pieces, a special concession, but he obviously wishes he were elsewhere.

* * * *

But young matrons, like Mrs. Henry Wallace, from the enormous nearby apartment houses and hotels, where so many Government officials live, prefer a peek at the baby jaguar, an oversize spotted kitty, which wisely retires to its nursery when its mother becomes ravenously hungry just before lunch.

"—this wolf seems unhappy."

* * * *

Around feeding time, while the great cats are clawing at their bars or scratching the board floors or growling over their red meat, the happy sloths sleep upside down in a central cage in the cat house, apparently unaware that a daily jungle crisis is going on, clinging undisturbed to branches near the ceiling.

* * * *

One big alligator boudoir in the next building is filled with cast-off saurian pets. . . . They were donated by perplexed owners when they were a few inches long, to a benevolent government, which has fed and sheltered them around a semitropical pool while they have grown up to be full-length, sleepy pets of the Republic.

* * * *

The incredible mandrills, with their pinkish-purple fronts and rears, are my favorites . . . Like many another animal in the National Zoo, they remind you of certain statesmen . . . Their apish bodies are a queer caricature of the lions next door . . . Two of them have been here 21 and 27 years, long enough to have learned a lot of the intricacies of statecraft.

Nye, Morley Talk on U. S. Peace Stand

North Dakota Senator Calls for Aloof Foreign Policy.

Editor of Post Points Out Difficulty of Isolation.

Sharply divergent recommendations for American foreign policy in the present world crisis last night were placed before the Washington Labor Peace Committee by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Felix Morley, editor of The Post.

American participation in any scheme of collective security was described by Sentaor Nye as "the easiest road to war," while Morley maintained an isolation policy presents "historical, economic, legal, moral and diplomatic difficulties."

"If isolation is a policy of scuttle and run," said Senator Nye, "I submit that it is preferable to a policy which sends American oil tankers up a foreign river, subject to hostility which may eventually involve 130,000,000 people in a war with which they have no concern."

Nye Draws on History.

Drawing copiously on American history from 1914 to 1917, the chairman of the famous Senate munitions probe warned that the United States must investigate the "shape and color" of democracies it may be called upon to preserve.

"I wish there had been an isolationist policy to embarrass Robert Lansing and Walter Hines Page, in the period before we were drawn into the last war," he declared.

Isolation, he conceded, "is going to cost us something—but all the foreign trade in Kingdom Come isn't worth an experience like that of 20 years ago."

Charging that America entered the World War to protect a financial interest in an Allied victory, the North Dakotan told an audience of 350 that "even the causes for which we allegedly fought the last time were all lost.

A plea to forget its "emotional feeling about Wal Street and the munitions makers," was voiced by Morley, who said the complex problem of peace must be approached with "clean, hard reasoning."

Attacks Neutrality Act.

In the close-knit modern world, he stated, "it is extremely difficult for any single nation to withdraw itself from the whole."

A wealthy industry or a great nation, moreover, must accept responsibility as an accompaniment of its power, he said.

Attacking the neautrality act, Morley observed that "America has a weakness for trying to legislate on subjects not susceptible to legislation. And in such cases, the less susceptible the subject, the more drastic the legislation is likely to be."

Ever since passage of the neutrality act, he declared, appropriations for national defense "have risen by leaps and bounds, and everybody knows militarization is the foe of democracy."

As "the visible alternative" to isolation, Morley offered a policy of co-operation among "like-minded" nations, reminding his listeners, chiefly delegates from trade unions, of the advantages gained by workers through organization.

Japan Beaten, Nye Says.

"It is tragic," he concluded, "that the only countries able to co-operate today are those interested in war as a profession."

In an open forum following the two speeches, Senator Nye replied to a question from the floor as to Japan's ultimate aims by describing the Nipponese empire as "already whipped."

Questioned on America's responsibility for curbing "gangsterism" throughout the world, Senator Nye responded emphatically, "I certainly do not believe it is our obligation, morally or otherwise, to prepare to police the world. If it is, our present $800,000,000 armament increase is not nearly enough."

Self-Defense Plea In Cafe Shooting

A plea of self-defense will be offered in District Court today by Louis J. Tapponier, 28-year-old former waiter, charged with slaying William M. Harris, 27, in a Ninth street cafe brawl last October. Tapponier also is said to have shot James F. Harris, 28, a brother of the slain man.

Defense Attorneys James A. O'Shea and Alfred Goldstein said they would seek to prove today that the deceased was a dangerous character and that Tapponier was justified in shooting him when he thought he was in danger.

A jury of twelve men was chosen late yesterday to hear the case, which is being tried before Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

Lutheran Leaders To Speak Tonight

The Rev. Edwin Moll, D.D., of Madison, Wis, and the Rev Henry J Pflum, jr., D.D., of Buffalo, N. Y., will address the Lutherans of Washington tonight at 8 p. m. at Keller Memorial Lutheran Church.

This meeting, first in a series of 15 the two pastors will conduct throughout the United States, will be conducted by the Rev. J. Harold Mumper, Keller Memorial pastor.

Dr. Moll, pastor of Luther Memorial Church at the University of Wisconsin, is a native of Australia. Dr. Pflum is pastor of Holy Trinity Church, Buffalo, N. Y., and president of the Board of American Missions of the Luthera Church.

Parents Ask Police Help to Turn Boys Back From Venture.

McKinley W. Kreigh, 13, and Leonard Day, 15, are believed bound for the Southwest to "punch cows" "after the fashion of McKinley's father who spent his early life on a Kansas ranch.

That was the probable reason told police yesterday by Kreigh as he reported his son missing. McKinley left his home at 3800 Military road northwest Saturday. Reported missing at the same time was Earl Leonard Day, his chum, 15, 7535 Van Ness street northwest.

Kreigh's father said he frequently has told his son of adventures as a cowboy. Maps the boys apparently had studied before they left were found in the Kreigh home.

Kreigh is chief of the legal section of the rules and regulations division of the Internal Revenue Bureau. He said his son had $5 when he disappeared. The Day boy had $27 he had earned selling newspapers.

Congress' Note To Spain Scored By Mgr. Ready

60 Who Lauded Barcelona Parliament Ignore Ruin of Church, He Says.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, yesterday expressed amazement that 60 Senators and Representatives have signed a congratulatory message to be sent to the Spanish Parliament on the occasion of its opening in Barcelona today.

Admitting that many questions concerning the Spanish war "are still being debated, and with a show of good faith," Mgr. Ready asserted that "on one question there can be no argument; and that is that the Barcelona government and its predecessors have been responsible for the torture and murder of thousands of bishops and priests and nuns, the desecration and destruction of hundreds of churches and shrines, and the complete denial of religious freedom."

Press Suppressed.

"Further evidence of the fine 'democracy' of the Barcelona government is seen in the suppression of the freedom of the press and the denial of every other liberty the 60 signers profess to hold dear," Mgr. Ready said.

Lashing out at the Congressmen involved, Mgr. Ready insisted that "no such government, whether it is legally in power or not, whether it can call itself 'democratic' or not, deserves the good wishes and moral support of any conscientious upholder of our Constitution, the more so if he is sworn to that obligation as an official representative of our genuinely free democracy."

Religion Proscribed.

Mgr. Ready stated that the loyalist government "has absolutely proscribed the exercise of religion in the territory which it governs."

Indicating that the Spanish Embassy here may have been responsible for "the circulation of this petition," Mgr. Ready said that "one may well wonder whether an embassy has been turned into a propaganda 'pressure' agency."

He described as a "consoling thought" the fact thta "only 11 per cent" of the membership of Congress "have lent their name to this petition."

"This is a healthy sign," Mgr. Ready declared, "that democracy is still what it purports to be in the United States, and not a mere sham and catchword as it is in some countries."

200 Will Discuss Co-operative Move

About 200 persons, including members of Congress from Middle Western and Western States are expected to attend a discussion of the co-operative movement in Washington and the Nation at the home of former Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

Senators Bulkley, Capper and Lundeen and Representatives Scott, Smith, Pierce, Teigan and Voorhis are among the legislators expected to be present. Plans for the gathering were made by Leon Henderson, former NRA economist, Richard W. Hogue, and the District Co-operative League.

Frank Bane, head of the Social Security Board; Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, and Mrs. Meyer, Mabel Walker Willebrandt and others well known in the city's social and official life also are expected to attend.

Anacostia Bridge Plan Is Approved

Construction plans for the new fixed steel highway bridge across the Anacostia River in line with Pennsylvania avenue southeast were approved yesterday by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson.

Money for the construction of the bridge, however, will not be forthcoming in the next fiscal year, appropriations for the item having been deleted from the District Commissioners' budget by the House Appropriations sub-committee.

The plans for the construction of the bridge were completed by a New York firm of contractors.

It is quite possible, however, that another attempt will be made to include the item in the bill before final approval, it was learned.

Police Adopt Strict Policy On Accidents

Brown Orders Prompt Arrest of Drivers Who Violate Law.

'Settlements' After Traffic Mishaps to Be Forbidden.

Stressing safety and swift arrest of motorists blamed for accident deaths, injuries or property damage, the Metropolitan Police will follow a new policy effective today.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, last night outlined the highway safety program and efficient administration of traffic regulations.

No longer will it be possible for drivers to "settle things out of court" by paying damages. Maj. Brown instructed his men to take action in every accident case.

"This system has been adopted to reduce the number of traffic accidents," said Maj. Brown. "The effectiveness of this system depends on members of the force—and to make it effective, it is necessary for members of the force to make thorough and careful investigations of every accident coming to their attention."

Under the new method, the police chief said, officers arriving at the scene of an accident will determine the cause, who was at fault and take proper action.

"It is the intention to investigate all accidents for the purpose of prosecuting in court the individual or individuals responsible. The fact that the drivers have settled damages between themselves does not interest the Police Department. We are interested in seeing that the person responsible is made to answer for his violation."

In line with the scientific traffic control methods made popular by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, youthful Evanston, Ill., safety authority, Maj. Brown said he would equip accident investigation cars with the latest in modern detection apparatus.

At the same time, he warned his men against unnecessary speed or recklessness in answering alarms.

"Officers," said Maj. Brown, "should reach the scene of trouble as quickly as possible, comparable with safety. Better a few minutes delay than not getting there at all as the result of an accident.

"If a police car races through the streets, disregarding signs and lights, with sirens wide open," he continued, "the reaction on the part of the public is bad and retards the progress of efficient accident investigation."

He also warned the force to park police cars so they will not become an obstacle or menace to traffic during an investigation. At night, all cars at the scene should be protected by likhted flares, he ordered.

Maj. Brown laid great stress on procedure in hit-and-run cases. He urged his men to use every possible means in locating the responsible driver in this type of mishap. Immediate contact should be made with headquarters, detailing all available information and descriptions after a preliminary investigation of hit-skip crashes, he said.

Accident investigation officers—who recently completed a training course under Lieut. Kreml at the University of Maryland—will travel in pairs. At each accident scene, under the new order, they will separate, questioning individual drivers and witnesses.

Maj. Brown cautioned the investigators to carefully observe motorists for physical defects, sobriety or other factors which may have contributed to the crash.

And as the new system was announced last night, seven students of the Northwestern University Traffic Institute—representing police departments in various sections of the country—arrived in Washington for a two-day survey of conditions.

They toured headquarters yesterday and will visit the Federal Bureau of Investigation today. The men represent the pick of the Nation's municipal police forces and are studying the Kreml system of traffic control.

The men include:

Harold E. Green, a member of the institute staff; Capt. Bernard R. Caldwell, Los Angeles; Acting Lieut. Louis J. Fuller, Los Angeles; Sergt. Fred D. Webster, Saginaw, Mich.; Patrolmen Paul J. Price, Dayton, Ohio; Arthur J. Leahey, Syracuse, N. Y.; Morgan J. Naught, Elizabeth, N. J., and Walter F. Johnson, Denver, Colo.

3 D. C. Men Pass Consular Tests

Three Washingtonians are among the 21 candidates who were successful in the recent Foreign Service examinations, the State Department announced yesterday.

Philip W. Bonsal, of 3051 N street northwest, was born in New York City and is a graduate of Yale University.

A native Washingtonian who now lives in Chevy Chase, Md., Philip M. Davenport graduated from the University of Pennsylvania last year.

H. Francis Cunningham, jr., who was also born here, now lives in Lincoln, Nebr. He attended the University of Nebraska and has also studied at the Konsular-Akademie, Vienna, Austria, and the University of Graz, Austria.

Industries Needed to Make Haven Self-Supporting Zionist Leader Says.

Establishment of fishing industries and construction of the Port of Tel Aviv in Palestine with "Jewish ships flying Jewish flags," were cited as the key points in the development of the Holy Land by Mrs. Goldie Meyerson, prominent Zionist leader, in an address last night before a mass meeting at the Jewish Community Center.

A member of the executive board of the Palestine Jewish Federation of Labor and a sponsor of the Palestine Jewish Maritime Co., Mrs. Meyerson declared that the establishment of industries yielding sufficient capital to offer employment to Jews in Palestine "is the obvious solution to the plight of Jews in countries where they are treated as untouchables."

"Unless we can make American Jews investment-minded in Palestine, we can't possibly obtain our goal of rehabilitating the Holy Land," the speaker asserted.

Reviewing recent establishment of Jewish colonies in Palestine and the existence of lucrative fishing areas in the Mediterranean Sea, Mrs. Meyerson urged American Jews to lend financial aid in creating employment in the country for "your unfortunate and deserving fellow men."

"With the creation of an adequate port and fishing village at Tel Aviv," Mrs. Meyerson said, "and with ships flying the Jewish flag on many seas, our people may again hold their heads high and offer a haven for persecuted Jews of other countries."

$2,225,000 Relief Asked for District

Labor leaders, social workers, churchmen and educators yesterday sent a letter to members of Congress urging that $2,225,000 be appropriated for emergency relief in Washington. The District appropriation bill for 1939, now before the House, provides only $900,000.

Congress was to designate 12½ per cent of the appropriation for administration and service. Chairman Ross Collins, of the House appropriations sub-committee in charge of the District bill, has provided only 7½ per cent for personal services.

Those signing the petition were the Rev. John L. Mixon, Maj. Gilbert S. Decker, Rose Brunswick, Mary Mason Jones, Francis X. Dodd, D. A. Wilkerson, Helen A. Shuford, Sidney R. Katz, Veronica Devlin, John J. Charnow, Louise A. Wilson, Herbert Benjamin, Anne P. Halliday, Olive W. Swinney, William H. Savin, Margaret Mayer, Florence Murray, Mrs. George B. Galloway and Charles P. Franklin.

First Lady Doesn't Choose to Sit for Portrait, She Says

Mrs. Roosevelt is against portraits—of herself, at least.

She told her press conference yesterday that she never will sit for a painting. "I don't wish to perpetuate myself in the White House or anywhere else," she said with emphasis.

The issue was brought up by the Women's Trade Union proposal to present a portrait of Mrs. Roosevelt to the gallery of President's wives in the White House. But Mrs. Roosevelt does not choose to sit.

Pursuing the subject further, she explained that it is not her fault that the gallery includes no portrait of Mrs. Herbert Hoover. The Girl Scouts presented a picture of the former First Lady to the White House but it never has been hung.

"Some people have even accused me of hiding it around the Executive Mansion somewhere," Mrs. Roosevelt confessed. "As a matter of fact, I am still trying to get the picture to Washington and have written Mrs. Hoover twice about it."

Structure Failure Held Crash Cause

Structural failure of the vertical fins and rudders, resulting in loss of control, was the probable cause of the crash of a Northwest Airliner near Bozeman, Mont., January 10, the investigating board of the Bureau of Air Commerce reported to Secretary of Commerce Roper yesterday.

From testimony of witnesses it was apparent, the board said, that the plane, carrying ten to their deaths, went out of control almost immediately after it cleared the Bridger Mountain Range.

The investigating board consisted of Miller C. Foster, assistant to Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, chairman; E. A. Peterman, chief of the West Coast branch, Bureau of Air Commerce; Jesse W. Lankford, chief of the Accident Analysis Section, Bureau of Air Commerce, and Robert I. Hazen, airline inspector of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Fred B. Sheriff, Montana commissioner of aeronautics, served as an advisory member.

Burke Is Retired As Appeals Clerk

After 34 years of service in the United States Court of Appeals, Clerk Moncure Burke, of his own volition, yesterday applied for and was granted retirement because of ill health.

Burke, who succeeded Henry Hodges, who retired several years ago, is a widely quoted authority on appellate practice. In 1927 he published his notes on the practices of the Appeals Court.

A graduate of National University Law School, Mr. Burke also holds the degree of master of patent laws from George Washington University. His home is at 3903 Jenifer street northwest.

3 Felons Flee Lorton, but Are Retaken

Guards Run Them Down Three Hours After Flight.

Three men serving time for hold-ups in Washington were captured last night three hours after they escaped from a dormitory at Lorton Reformatory. They were captured in a ditch at the edge of the prison grounds.

Seventy-five armed guards with eight bloodhounds working in pairs and powerful searchlights scoured the grounds and thick woods nearby. Miles of tunnels carrying pipes under the prison area were searched carefully. The searching parties were under Capt. Paul Peglow.

The prisoners were:

Jay C. Lankford (alias Jack Candler, More), 23, of Union, S. C. He was committed to Lorton November 1, to serve two to three years for assault and robbery.

Robert J. Evans, 21, of Washington, committed December 1, to serve two to five years for robbery and joy riding.

Cecil R. Kennedy, 18, of Washington, committed October 25, to serve 18 months to 3 years for robbery.

The three men escaped 10 minutes after the 7:30 o'clock checkup. They were checked in at that time and within the next few minutes rumors floated through the prison that three men had escaped. A second checkup proved them missing.

They were in a dormitory with 100 other men, all second termers. All windows in this building are barred and a guard paced constantly before the barred door.

They told Col. William C. Peak, superintendent, after their capture, that they walked from the door a few minutes after the checkup, walked across the open prison yard, lifted a manhole and let themselves into one of the tunnels. Walking down this, they said, they emerged in the boiler house, from which they fled to a shallow ravine.

Creeping down this ravine, they finally reached the southwets corner of the prison grounds near Tower 9, still inside the unwalled prison area. They decided to wait there until they found an opportunity to flee in the dark.

"We give up," they shouted and stood up.

Lower Electric Rates in Effect For D. C. Today

Commissioners May Act on Own Allocation of $770,000 Saving.

Domestic and commercial consumers of electric power in the District will begin paying reduced rates today in compliance with a recent order of the Public Utilities Commission, estimated to result in a $770,000 saving.

The reduction accompanied lowering of the company's rate of return to 6 per cent. The P. U. C., however, has not approved any of the rate schedules Pepco has submitted. It was understood the new schedules, when approved, will be retroactive to today.

The company had offered a plan that would have allocated 30 per cent of the $770,000 savings to domestic consumers. The remainder would have been divided among commercial consumers, including the District and Federal governments.

The commission balked at this proposal, however, and asked the company to submit further schedules in which domestic consumers would receive a larger portion of the reduction.

Oyster Granted Jury Hearing in Business Tax Case

Police Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday overruled his colleague, Judge Edward M. Curran, and held that Fairfax Oyster, prominent Washington produce dealer, is entitled to a jury trial on charges of failing to file returns under the business privilege tax.

Oyster is charged with failing to file returns on October 16, October 30, November 13, November 27 and December 16. Oyster claims the returns were filed and he received a license.

Curran had ruled that the law made no provision for jury trial.

Lonsdale Play Wins Plaudits On First Night

'Once Is Enough' Brings Ina Claire to National in Comedy Hit.

High comedy has returned to the National Theater.

With theh rilliant wit, the clinically penetrating insight into characters of articulate charm and the incomparable flair for "sophistication" that have hall-marked so many of his earlier works, Frederick Lonsdale, in "Once Is Enough," has contrived a vehicle for the superlative talents of Ina Claire and a distinguished company of associate artists that multiplies regret that he has been absent from the public rostrums for the past five years.

Given its first metropolitan presentation in the National last evening, before one of the notable audiences of the season, "Once Is Enough" again demonstrated the sagacity of Gilbert Miller, the producer, the secure eminence of Miss Claire as the foremost of American comediennes and the fine effect that may be expected to accrue from the assemblage of a supporting cast of balanced and superior excellence. That the play should fall short of being a "hit" in the estimation of any intelligent audience is unthinkable.

Old Devices Made New.

The devices that Mr. Lonsdale has adopted to point the developments of his three acts are not new. They radiate luminously from the spontaneous ardors of a week-end house party in the home of the Duke of Hampshire, in England. Wives and husbands among Britain's aristocracy are on the verge of marital rifts that present fabulous opportunities for emotional pyrotechnics. This is a long-known premise upon which to found combustible drawing-room drama. But Mr. Lonsdale has kept his pivotal figures so thoroughly in check, has imbued them with such sparkling brilliance of speech and motivated his charade with such rational impulses as to lend the comedy a thoroughgoing authenticity that effectively veils its fundamentally farcical nature and glosses over its frailties with an artistically delicate veneer of well-bred and wholly delightful savoir faire.

At base "Once Is Enough" is a risque business. It does not exclude that "fundamental blunder of the universe" known as "sex" from the vital elements of either its substance or its structure. It rather depends upon the matter of gender for its propulsion. But it does so with such finesse, such unfailing good humor and such a sound apprehension of solid human traits of character and feminine shrewdness as to strip the piece of any suggestion of offensive frankness. This is the sort of house party to which every literate person always hopes to be invited at least once in his life. It is just barely possible that a final conclusion might be that 'Once Is Enough."

There is no point in detailing "plot," beyond the brief recital that a delightful young duchess, by the exercise of that peculiar feminine endowment that always will make the male of the species the symbol of complete fatuity and bewilderment, solves a connubial problem that threatens the happiness of seven years of blissful married life. She accomplishes this Herculean feat by the exercise of those inborn intuitions that even other women cannot fathom. She does it with the connivance of a trusted few and the active opposition of a meager, but desperate, minority. But she does it. The whole point of the play depends upon that. And it is a very fine, very sharp and very highly polished point, to be sure.

Mr. Lonsdale evidently has written of types with whom he is completely familiar—glib, gracious, whimsical and bitter folk, who conduct their peccadilloes in the syllables and accents of ladies and gentlemen and comport themselves in the approved fashion of persons to both the manor and the manner born.

Is Admirably Acted.

A glance at the dramatis personae preceding these comments will convey some notion of the social caste involved in this frivolous, dramatically unimportant and wholly fascinating study of contrasted upper stratum types playing at intensely amusing domestic enterprises. There is the Lord with the liver, the dowager with a penchant for tart speech, the preying young wife with the elderly husband, the handsome young husband with the understanding wife and a Russian who can beat them all at any game they choose to name—and makes his living that way—except love, which he is just a little too shrewd to include among his major proficiencies. All very refreshing.

Ina Claire, in the stellar role, finds her more impressive outlets for a glorious command of brittle comedy in the second and third acts. The first affords her little that lays any heavy demand upon one of the most facile talents for sprightly impersonation known to the contemporary theater. In the later intervals of the play she is mistress of every scene in which she appears. In the opposite role, that of the deluded hubsand, Hugh Williams is efficient and effective and Viola Keats offers an equally potent portrayal of the slightly unsympathetic role of Liz Playdell, the predatory guest in a rival's home.

To enumerate the others who contribute largely to the uniform excellence of this frothy adventure in English home life would be to rename all of the able actors whose names already appear at the top of this column.

Mr. Miller has given the comedy an impeccable production.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

George M. Cohan, First Gentleman of the Theater, Receives a Merited Badge of Humorous Distinction

The "Yankee Doodle Comedian," Singled Out by Judge for Thursday Decoration; Some Personal Recollections; Another "Sneak Preview;" Jimmy Fidler Writes a Letter; Bryn Mawr Club Sponsors Performance Tonight; Two Zanies on Way; Notes.

BELL.

GEORGE M. COHAN, veteran "song-and-dance man," today will be named "the outstanding humorist of the United States stage" by the editors of Judge Magazine. A high silk hat emblematic of the award, is to be presented to Mr. Cohan on the stage Thursday night in New York after the performance of "I'd Rather Be Right," in which the "Yankee-Doodle comedian" pokes harmless fun at President Roosevelt and many New Dealisms.

Special invitations have been sent by Judge's publisher, Harry Newman, to Presidential Press Secretary Stephen T. Early, Alf M. Landon—who, also, is genially harpooned in the play; Al Smith and Senator Vandenburg, of Michigan, to attend the presentation.

"Judge is not taking political sides in picking Mr. Cohan for this award," Publisher Newman says. "We are honoring an actor, playwright, songster and producer who has proved that wholesome humor can be profitable. At the age of 16, Cohan had saved $1,100. At 29 he had half a million. At 34, with Sam H. Harris, he controlled five theaters in New York, two in Chicago and had companies playing from coast to coast. At 41 he fought, single-handed, the biggest labor war in the history of the American stage; gave $100,000 in cash to found Fidelity and battle Equity for the 'open shop.' He took a licking that would have killed off a less Napoleonic figure and laughed it through to regain the affection and wholehearted suport of the entire theatrical world.

"Cohan will be 60 next July 4 and is still at it, vigorous and smiling. He has more than 50 plays to his credit, 400 popular songs and a record of acting more than 500 weeks on Broadway. For 13 years—from 1914 to 1927—he didn't dance. Then he danced for 37 straight weeks. This winter he is dancing again, after a ten-year layoff.

"Cohan isn't a big fellow. He never weighed 100 pounds until he was 27. His weight for 15 years has been 137. His hair is sparse and silver-white—much like Jerry's, his lamented father's—his eyes are blue, his cheeks full, pink and wrinkling with good nature when he smiles.

"In honoring George M. Cohan with its February High Silk Hat, Judge is not belittling the Administration. It is doing honor to humor which can dissolve pomposity, tumble vanity, disarm ignorance. It is giving to George M. Cohan his just due as the No. 1 man of today's stage world—actor, producer, songster, playwright and humorist."

* * * *

There are a few personal recollections and contacts with this eminent man of the theater that obtrude themselves at this point.

When the Four Cohans—Helen, Jerry, Josephine and George, mother, father and sister—were one of the standard headline acts of vaudeville, when vaudeville was vaudeville (that would be back in the late '90's), your reporter, times without number, hung over the gallery rail of the Chicago Opera House, Olympic Theater and the Haymarket, the three Kohl and Castle first-string variety houses in the Windy City, to watch this remarkable kid almost tear himself apart in the most sensational "buck-and-wing" dances of their day. This was the turn-of-the-century equivalent of the present-day tap dances, so miraculously executed by such artists as Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Mitzi Mayfair, Bill Robinson, Hal Le Roy, Eleanor Whitney and all the rest. But the fact remains that George M. Cohan is the daddy of them all.

Then there was the time, not so long ago, when we approached Georgie Cohan, then playing the National Theater in a "straight" comedy, on the matter of lending his presence to The Post's annual banquet for its route agents and carrier boys. "There will be hundreds of these youngsters there," we said. "I'll be there, too," said Mr. Cohan. And he was.

Backstage at the opening of "I'd Rather Be Right," in Baltimore, I asked him why he had kept this column waiting so long for a recrudescence of the old Chicago dances. "Let's not go into that," he replied. "That's going back a few years, kid!"

A prince of the theater, ladies and gentlemen, who deserves every honor that can come to him. And congratulations, Mr. Newman and Judge, on your loyalty and discernment.

Now just a word more about the stars who visited Washington over the week-end for the President's Birthday Celebration.

Louise Fazenda was in the East as "ambassadress of good will" for the Warner Brothers' studios. Her new picture, "Swing Your Lady" just had its Broadway premiere, or is about to have, I forget which. Miss Fazenda, true-blue fellow-Hoosier that she is, is not making a personal appearance tour, but still has some important points to cover for her bosses. She went from here to New Orleans and next will make Dallas, Tex., before returning to the home lot in Hollywood, where her husband, Hal Wallis, is associate production manager with Jack Warner.

Joe Brown left yesterday for a quick trip back to Columbia Studios; Ray and Mrs. Bolger and Eleanor Powell and her youthful and vivacious mother for New York. Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March (Florence Eldridge) have remained over a day or two and probably will leave town today or tonight.

The rest of the visiting stars, more or less, have scattered to the four winds.

* * * *

So here comes another "sneak preview." The Capital already has had "I Met My Love Again," now at RKO-Keith's, and Cecil B. DeMilles' "The Buccaneer," coming to the Palace screen on Friday, slipped in as added fillips to regular amusement weeks. Just an old Hollywood custom that happens to be new to Washington. Thus it is that the management of the Little Theater announces another "sneak" of a notable picture, never before seen in this city, for Wednesday night of this week—that would be tomorrow on any man's calendar—at 11 o'clock. Those attending the regular presentation of the revival of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," starring Paul Muni, will be permitted to remain for the preview screening without additional charge.

* * * *

Tonight's performance of Ina Claire's new Lonsdale comedy, "Once Is Enough," at the National, will be under the auspices of the Washington Bryn Mawr Club.

The proceeds will be divided between a scholarship for some deserving District feminine high school or preparatory school student and the Annual Summer School for Women in Industry, conducted on the Bryn Mawr campus every summer.

The house probably will be packed—a safe guess when Miss Claire is the star of a play in her home town.

Comes a friendly and flattering letter from Jimmy Fidler, The Post's Hollywood correspondent whose column appears regularly on this page, concerning our January 10 column devoted to his short-reel subject, "Personality Parade." Jimmy and I happened to know personally a great many of the old-time stars in that release, but not the same ones. In combination, we could give you a pretty fair coverage of the field. Anyhow, it was nice of him to write and say: "Many pleasant reviews and comments about my two-reel 'Personality Parade' have come to my desk, but none so fine as yours in your column of January 10. There were many memories—your personal ones—that I enjoyed knowing about."

That makes it even.

Those merry wags, Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, are coming back to town Friday to headline the stage revue at Loew's Capitol Theater. Get those cyclone cellars ready, folks. These boys are dynamite.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Making the rounds of the studios, I am impressed by the growing importance of Hollywood's second generation.

JEANETTE MacDONALD.

Some of them have important positions in "production;" some are making their marks as scenarists; some are on their way to the top as actors and actresses. And one thing that they all seem to have in common — the one thing that their elders lacked—is the realization that picture making is a serious business, a permanent career.

You do not see these young sters flashing down the boulevard in block-long cars, and you do not see them squandering their money in Hollywood's night clubs. I have yet to hear of one of them being involved in a scandal or to hear one of them accused of being a drunkard. The mistakes that pa and ma made, back in the glamorous yesterdays when Hollywood was a three-ring circus, they are avoiding with care that is really amazing when you consider the fact that most of them are still in their "giddy" twenties.

When I think of the horror with which old-fashioned parents regarded the influence of "show people," I have to indulge in a sarcastic "Oh yeah." These Hollywood youngsters are the sanest, most matured "second generation" on earth.

* * * *

For the past several months friends of mine who live in one of the most secluded canyons of the Hollywood Hills have been telling me about a "handsome hermit"-who lives nearby. As a rule Hollywood Hill dwellers are neighborly folks—probably because it is much more convenient to borrow an occasional pound of sugar than it is to drive a long mile to a grocery store. But this new arrival is an exception to the rule. He borrows no sugar, gives no parties—and actually seems to dodge every would-be acquaintance. No one in the neighborhood, I am informed, knows his identity—and that puts me one up on the neighborhood. Today, driving by, I saw him and recognized George Sanders, Twentieth Century-Fox's newest star. Garbo should look to her laurels.

* * * *

This is hardly the proper season of the year for "sob" stories but . . . Today Producer Sol Lesser received one of the most touching letters I have ever read. It was from a physician in a little Nevada town. He had just seen Bobby Breen in "Make a Wish," and wanted to know how much would it cost him to buy a print of that picture. He explained that he does not wish to show the picture publicly, that he only wants it "because Bobby Breen looks so much like my own little boy, who died a few months ago." Sol Lesser is more noted for business ability than for sentiment, but he could not resist the sincerity of that request. When "Make a Wish" is withdrawn from circulation, one of the old prints will be sent to that doctor, free of charge.

* * * *

An amusing anecdote about Hollywood's "perfect couple." It seems that Jeanette MacDonald was notified that her ancestry entitles her to wear the heraldic red and blue plaid of the MacDonald Clan. She sent to Edinburgh, Scotland, for a bolt of the cloth, intending to have it made into a "tartan," but, a few days after its arrival, it mysteriously disappeared. After a painstaking search, Jeanette reconciled herself to its loss and mailed a second order to Scotland. And then Gene Raymond sprang his surprise. Leading the Little Woman into an infrequently used room of their house, he proudly displayed a new set of furniture, upholstered in the precious cloth. The MacDonald, I hear, was furious.

Stars Combine To Honor Best Animal Actors

The award of a statuette for the best performance by an animal in 1937 will be made in March by Miss Davis and Bogart.

The idea of presenting such an award originated with Bogart. Because Miss Davis won an Academy award for her performance in "Dangerous" in 1935, Bogart invited her to aid him in his plan and she agreed.

Since the plan was announced two weeks ago, thousands of nominations have come in to the Warner studio. Two extra girls have been employed in the fan mail department to tabulate the votes.

To aid fans who wish to cast their votes for their animal favorites, Bogart and Miss Davis last week compiled a list of animals who gave outstanding performances in 1937. The list follows:

Skippy, wire haired terrier star of "After the Thin Man" and "The Awful Truth;" the water buffalo in "The Good Earth;" Squeegee, the pekingese, in "Tovarich;" Rex, the Scottie, in the "Penrod" series; Cyclone, the police dog in the Pete Smith short, "A Friend Indeed;" Stooge, the Cairn terrier in "Slave Ship; Mack the Scottie in "Stand In;" Junior the horse Joel McCrea rides in "Wells Fargo;" Jiggs, the Chimpanzee, in "Her Jungle Love;" Peewee, the Great Dane, in "Breakfast For Two;" Waldo, the terrier in "Shall We Dance;" Whitney, the cat, in "Stage Door;" Corky, the cur, in "Theodora Goes Wild;" Pete, the ring-eyed bulldog in the "Our Gang" comedies; Lamb, the sheep dog, in "Topper;" Anita, the race horse in "Checkers;" Shorty and Tuffy, the Chimpanzees in "Jungle Juveniles," a Pete Smith short.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

McAleer Quits Washington for Boston; Griffith Attempts to Raise $10,000 to Complete Manager-Stock Ownership Deal.

Chapter Seventeen.

AN AMERICAN LEAGUER AT HEART, and yearning for a return to the league he helped found in those adventurous days of 1900-01, Clark Griffith misspent three years as manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

They were lush seasons financially. Griffith was being paid $7,500 yearly, a 50 per cent increase over the $5,000 salary he drew during his eight years' management of the New York Yankees. Wealthy Garry Herrmann, owner of the Reds, was unswerving in his affection for Griffith and, to the end, begged him to remain as the Cincinnati manager.

When Griffith landed the Reds in fourth place in 1909, his first year at the helm, it was applauded as something of a managerial feat. Not in six years had the Reds been a first-division club. Miller Huggins was at second base on that 1909 team.

But, when the Reds lapsed to fifth in 1910 and sixth in 1911, impatient Cincinnati fans, who had anticipated a pennant, soured mildly on Griffith. Jack Ryder, sports editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, demanded a new deal in managers and, at the end of the 1911 season, Griffith advised Owner Herrmann that the club's interests would best be served if he were permitted to resign.

Herrmann, who needed no profits from his ball club, laughed down Griffith's proposal and reiterated that Griffith had a job for life with the Cincinnati team.

Had not an American League managerial berth beckoned him and a powerful nostalgia developed, Griffith would have remained at Cincinnati with Herrmann. He esteemed the Reds' owner for his sportsmanship which, in fact, had long been a by-word in big league baseball circles.

Herrmann, a financier who held office in the International Typographical Union, was the Grand Exalted Ruler of The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and was also the most powerful man in baseball during Griffith's term at Cincinnati. As chairman of the National Baseball Commission, a post comparable to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis' later-day commissionership, Herrmann was literally the czar of the game.

McAleer to Boston, Washington Managership Is Open.

BUT HE WAS REVERED for his utter fairness in office. During the war between the American and National Leagues, early in the century, Herrmann leaned far backward to allot the slugger, Sam Crawford, to the Detroit club after Crawford had "jumped" his own Cincinnati team. None was a more lavish and generous host. It was Herrmann's custom during the annual meetings of the club owners to deposit $10,000 currency in the safe at hotel headquarters, and by his command, the meeting was not to adjourn until the $10,000 was fully spent on the entertainment of the visiting magnates and managers. He was to die, penniless, in 1934 at the age of 71.

Jimmy McAleer was wearying of his job as the Washington manager. During the seasons of 1909-10-11, McAleer's Washington teams had finished seventh twice and eighth once. The gag, "Washington, first in war, first in peace and last in the American League," was comparatively new and a sure-fire laugh.

During that spring of 1911, fire destroyed the grandstands and fences at the Washington park and blighted the Senators' season from the outset. Near the end of the campaign, when he had a chance to buy into the Boston Red Sox, McAleer and Robert McRoy, secretary to League President Ban Johnson, each invested $75,000 and took over half of the Red Sox stock. McAleer succeeded John I. Taylor as president of the Boston club and released Patrick Donovan as manager and installed J. Garland (Jake) Stahl.

Griffith Offered Pilot's Job With Senators.

CLARK GRIFFITH REGARDED COVETOUSLY the Washington vacancy. Despite the consistent failures of Washington teams, he had long envisioned the Capital as a profitable baseball town. In his mind's eye, he still saw the wild acclaim with which Washington fans greeted Manager Jake Stahl when the Senators, during the season of 1904, loomed as a pennant threat. Red fire was burned in the streets of Washington that season and the memory of that rabid baseball demonstration remained with Griffith.

With Thomas Noyes, co-publisher of the Washington Star and chief stockholder in the Senators, Griffith had long been friendly. Ed Walsh, Washington insurance broker and a director of the team, had previously broached to Griffith the possibility that the Washington managership would be vacant, making a virtual tender of the job to the 42-year-old ex-pitching star.

At a meeting of the Washington stockholders at the Commercial Club, off Lafayette Square, and hard by the White House, Griffith was offered the management of the team. The stockholders had voted to reorganize the financial set-up of the team and to increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000. There would be more working capital for the new manager, they pointed out to Griffith.

At the same time, certain stockholders politely suggested to Griffith that he risk some of his own money in the venture, pointing out that stock would be available. If they thought they were treading on delicate ground with that suggestion they were not long in doubt.

Griffith welcomed the proposal that he be taken into the Washington Baseball Corporation as a stockholder. The impetuous, adventuresome youth of those turbulent Nineteenth Century years and the early 1900's had grown up. He was now a middle-aged man with a 16-year pitching career and 11 years as a major league manager behind him. Sprays of gray were beginning to show about his temples. It was high time he settled down.

Of late he had been given to reflecting that he, alone, of the three men who founded the American League had not made a financial success of the venture. Ban Johnson, as president of the league, had an iron-clad contract that called for $40,000 yearly. Charles Comiskey, who, with Johnson and Griffith, had plotted the launching of the league, was waxing wealthy as the downright owner of the profitable Chicago White Sox, a perennial first-division club.

Stock Deal With Washington Club Almost Falls Through.

AND NOW, JIMMY McALEER, a teammate in those old Milwaukee days of 1888, was on the high road to financial success as one-fourth owner and president of the Boston Red Sox. Sadly, Griffith had been reflecting that he had not yet found a stable and altogether profitable place in the game of which he had been so long an integral figure.

Buy stock? Of course he would buy stock. He wanted stock in the Washington team. All that they would let him buy. Bravely, he offered to purchase all available shares at a reasonable price.

It was a courageous offer, because Griffith was as bereft of heavy cash as a bankrupt church mouse. But he thought he knew where he could borrow the necessary money.

But greedy Washington stockholders hiked the price on Griffith. The stock for which they had paid $12.50 per share, they would not sell to Griffith for less than $15. In righteous indignation, Griffith balked. The deal apparently was falling through.

Then, President Thomas Noyes, of the Washington club, called Griffith aside. He wanted Griffith to manage the Washington team. "Griff," he said, "you can have my 800 shares for what it cost me. I can say the same thing for my friends, Ben Minor and Ed Walsh. You can have their shares for $12.50, too. In all, that figures around 1,200 shares. Buy 800 more from those pirates at $15 and that'll give you 2,000 shares—a tenth interest in the club."

That proposition Griffith accepted, thanking Noyes for his kindness. He entrained for Philadelphia, there to visit League President Johnson.

Johnson had previously promised Griffith that he would loan him $10,000 if he wished to buy into the Washington club. Enthusiastically, Griffith told Johnson of the deal he had made, asked for the loan of the money.

And Ban Johnson's answer was:

"Sorry."

TOMORROW: Griffith manages to raise the necessary funds, mortgaging his Western property, and the Nats go into spring training . . . at Charlottesville, Va.

Terps Defeat V. P. I. 42 to 35; Norton Stars

By Bob Garrison.

Missing but three times, Charlie "Chuck" Norton, sensational sophomore center, employed an accurate shooting eye to convert his teammates' misses into a Maryland University triumph last night as he led the Terps to a Southern Conference victory over the V. P. I. basketball team at College Park, 42-35.

It was Maryland's third conference victory and came at a time when defeat at the hands of the Gobblers would have meant virtual elimination from the Southern Conference eight-club invitation tourney, at Raleigh next month.

Although Norton had returned from the Terps' week-end trip through Virginia and North Carolina running a violent fever the only trace of heat evident to the 1,000 spectators flared from his large hands that methodically flipped 23 points through the rim.

Five Goals on Spinners.

Operating from a block position, he accepted passes from his teammates and registered five goals on spinner plays and added as many with his springy fingers that tapped wild shots into the net as they rebounded from the backboard. He added three foul goals to his ten two-pointers to complete the night's work.

In so doing he overcame an 11-point lead that Wayne Ambrose, Catholic University forward, held over him in the District scoring race. His 23-point accumulation gave him first place and a 12-game total of 146, an even dozen more than Ambrose has totaled.

But oddly enough, while he was busy winning for Maryland, loose guarding by him allowed Mel Henry, Tech center, to score 15 points and at times in the second half it appeared that all his offensive talent would be eclipsed by his defensive errors.

Terps Lead at Half.

Maryland led most of the way through the first half, but relinquished the lead, shortly before the whistle blew, at 12-8, only to overtake the visitors and nose them out for first half honors, 18-16.

Norton had confined himself to nine points in the first 20 minutes, and entered the second half in need of three points to take the scoring lead. He had them quicker than it can be told and later broke out in a feverish fit to run up seven more in succession to give the Old Liners a 32-24 lead that just about spelled victory as the clock showed 10 minutes remaining.

Henry was working in much the same fashion, however, as he found the range from outside the Terps' effective zone defense and for one short moment it appeared that the Gobblers would eat up the Maryland lead. They advanced on the Terps to 37-32, but stayed there for three minutes as an interlude in the scoring of both teams occupied time right down to the very last minute.

Norton Sinks Two More.

At that time, Norton quickly sank two more field goals to close the Maryland scoring and Henry sank a pot shot from mid-floor as the gun sounded.

Georgetown Prep School's quintet scored one of the major upsets of the local scholastic court season yesterday by handing the Gonzaga five a severe 27 to 14 trouncing on the latter's court. A capacity crowd watched the victory.

It was the Little Hoya's first victory in the Catholic Prep School League and left them in a tie for second place with the Gonzagans, each with a victory and two defeats. St. John's is leading with two wins and no losses.

The hosts had beaten the Georgetown five by a 2-point margin on the Garrett Park court earlier in the campaign, and thus were heavy favorites to extend their victory streak in yesterday's battle.

Drilled on Zone Defense.

But Ed Hargaden, cagey mentor of the Little Hoyas, a former Eastern Conference star with Georgetown University, had drilled his charges against the zone defense employed by the Gonzagans for weeks, with an eye toward yesterday's encounter.

As a result the Garrett Parkers found loopholes in the Gonzaga defense and forced the Mitchellites and lads to resort to a man-to-man style of play early in the game.

The Little Hoyas scored 5 points before Connolly counted from the charity stripe for the Gonzagans, but that was the extent of their first quarter scoring as Georgetown led, 7 to 1.

They increased it to 14 to 7 at half time, with Earl Nadler and Charlie Devine contributing a majority of the scoring, and added to their margin in the third quarter, leading, 19 to 10, as the final period started. Gonzaga was outscored, 8 to 4, in the final period for the final 27-to-14 score.

Nadler Leads Scoring.

Nadler, with five field goals and two foul shots, led the scoring, counting only two less than the entire Gonzaga team, which was held to four floor goals. Connolly scored two of these, although Heiberger led the losers with 6 points, a field goal and 4 points from the foul line. Robert Boylan was a spark plug in the Little Hoyas, play, with a smooth offensive and defensive performance.

The decisive victory for the Georgetowners throws a new light on the prep school series, as the winners now have high hopes of upsetting the highly favored St. John's team when they visit the Garrett Park gym, and possibly creating a tie for the title.

It was the first time in eight years that Gonzaga has lost to the Georgetowners in the I street gym, and the first time the Hargaden-coached crew has won on either court in four years.

EVERETT HITS CANVAS IN THE SECOND

Patty Berg In Triple Tie For Medalist

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 31—Patty Berg, the Minneapolis red-head, shared the qualifying medal with two others who fired 2-under-par 80s in the Miami-Biltmore women's golf tournament today, but was seeded No. 3 for the first-round draw.

Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of West Palm Beach, Fla., received the top spot and Marion Miley, of Fort Pierce, Fla., the No. 2 position on a comparison of second-nine cards.

Miss Berg, winner of the recent Augusta, Ga., and Punta Gorda, Fla., tournaments, three-putted the final green to ruin her chances of earning the medal outright. Hitting the ball well, Miss Berg rounded the turn in 39, one under women's par, after picking up birdies at the seventh and eighth holes. She dropped a sizable putt for an eagle 3 on the tenth and birdied the twelfth, but she wandered over par on the thirteenth and home holes for an incoming 41, 1 under par for the nine.

Mrs. Jameson, out in 41, came back in 39 despite a penalty shot at the seventeenth, where her second shot found the water. Miss Miley had a 40 on each side but played erratic golf. Her card showed four birdies and an eagle, but she went 2 over par on one hole.

Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., runner-up to Miss Berg at Punta Gorda, and Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., qualified with 83s, a stroke ahead of Marion McDougall, of Portland, Oreg. Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, shot 86s.

Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Southern Women's champion, was well down the list of qualifiers with a 91, due to difficulty on the back nine, but was assured of one of the 32 places in the championship division.

Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Washington, D. C., qualified for match play. Mrs. Pray turned in a card of 48-47—95, while Mrs. Walper had 47-51—98.

Mrs. Walker meets Jane Jameson, co-medalist and Mrs. Pray opposes Helen Sumpter, Columbus. Mrs. Schluderberg and Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, also qualified for the championship bracket.

G. W. Beats W. Va. Five By 47 to 38

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 31.—George Washington University's basketball team, led by the three keen-eyed basket ringers, defeated West Virginia University's Mountaineers, 47 to 38, tonight before 900 fans.

The Colonials were hard-pressed in the early stages, but with the count 15-all, Garber, G. W. guard, rang up two field goals which gave his team a lead it never relinquished. George Washington led 23 to 17 at the half.

Faris, a forward, and Butterworth, center, each scored seven field goals and one free throw to score 15 points for George Washington. Garber scored 10 points. Brooks, of West Virginia, also had 15 points on four field goals and seven free shots.

Howell Resting After Operation

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 31 (AP).—Millard (Dixie) Howell, former University of Alabama football player, was reported "in excellent condition" at St. Vincents Hospital following an appendectomy today.

Fullis Signed.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Charles (Chick) Fullis, of Giardville, Pa., former outfielder with the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants and Philadelphia Phillies, was purchased by the Memphis Chicks today from the Columbus Club of the American Association.

D. C. Heavy on Verge Of K. O. Three Times

(Another Fight Picture Appears on Page 16.)

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bob Pastor, the lad who stayed 10 rounds with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, stayed 10 rounds with Buck Everett last night—and won a unanimous decision in plain view of a record audience at Joe Turner's Salon of Slug.

Nineteen-hundred cash customers paid for the privilege of seeing Everett go the distance with the highly touted New York youngster, and poured an all-time record sum of $2,465 into the box-office. They received full value for their money. Several hundred fans were turned away.

The only loss, outside of Everett's, was incurred by the sporting gentry who offered 5-1 on a Pastor victory, and 8-5 on a knockout by the same fighter. Precious little Everett money was in sight, but some daring souls risked a few bobs on Everetts chances of staying the limit and their faith was amply rewarded.

Honors were fairly evenly divided in the first and tenth rounds, but in between Pastor had things pretty much his own way. Well-conditioned, game to the core and infrequently willing to slug with his adversary, Everett absorbed considerable punishment, but his vast store of ring lore saved him from a knockout. Those who expected him to be slapped cold were sadly disappointed, although Pastor shook him to his heels no less than three different times.

No Knockdown Scored.

There were no knockdowns, although Everett's aged and weary legs wobbled precariously and he appeared on the verge of being knocked out on three distinct occasions and threatened to give way. He was wrestled to the canvas a second or two before the end of the second round, but by no stretch of the imagination could the fall be called a knockdown.

Pastor hit his adversary with everything allowed under the rules. He smacked him flush on the jaw with an overhand right in the fourth that sent Everett's mouthpiece sailing across the ring. But he never contacted a vital spot. Everett rocked and swayed from the impact of the New Yorker's blows, but his vast store of ring lore saved him from an untimely finish.

Everett failed to win a round on The Post's score sheet, but was given an even break in the first and tenth when he slugged it out with Pastor. The latter won every other session with his unrelenting attack to the body.

Everett Fought Well.

But lest you get the wrong impression of Everett, be assured that he did more than a little punching on his own account. Thrice he stopped the oncharging Pastor dead in his tracks with roundhouse rights that appeared to emerge from Row B, Section B, catching the victim on the side of his head and face. But Pastor's progress was retarded only temporarily, for he dropped into a crouch and waded in with both hands pumping leather to the body.

The last three rounds easily were the best and most exciting, surprisingly enough, and produced more action than a Democratic convention. Pastor had Everett on the verge of a knockett in the ninth, after belting him around the ring with both gloves in the eighth, but Buck withstood this flurry of fists and came back strong in the tenth to take the play away from his rival.

Pastor rocked Everett with a punishing body attack midway in the eighth round after himself taking a potent right to the head. Everett backed away as Pastor rushed in for the kill, waved a light left at Bob and followed with a roundhouse right that caught Pastor completely off guard. They flailed away with both hands at close quarters. Everett finally retreating into safer territory.

Pastor, hailed as one of the more promising young heavyweights on the fistic scene, dogged Everett's footsteps from the opening bell to the finish, but the veteran was too cagey for him. He concentrated his fire on the body throughout the first three rounds, shifting to the head briefly in the fourth and fifth, but with no visible effect. He stung Everett, beat him to most of the punches and jockeyed him around the ring, but couldn't outsmart him.

Everett's long, limpid left was an invaluable weapon, and he used it to best advantage. But he wasn't consistent enough with it to do much damage. He scored with his right, but the New Yorker was tough and well equipped with shock absorbers and shook off the blows.

Everett was in trouble as early as the second round when Pastor connected with a looping left to the tummy, and again in the third when Bob drove a series of rights to the heart, but managed to survive.

Preliminaries

The six-round semifinal resulted in a deserved, but unpopular, decision for Steve Mamakos over Joey Spangler. The latter was down twice for nine counts and tired badly in the fourth and fifth rounds. But he came back strong enough to knock Mamakos down in the sixth, taking the play away from him.

Buster Carroll outpointed Lou Jallos in another six-rounder that failed to excite the customers. The Boston lad had Jallos ready for a knockout in the third, but was outsmarted by the veteran nad unable to land the telling punch.

Doug Swetnam and Billy Smith went four slow rounds to draw in the opener, and the succeeding six-rounder between Tommy Tucker and Johnny Windsor wasn't much better.

Windsor, whose pugilistic career is intrusted to the loving care of "Evil Eye" Ben Finkel, made a very dull fight of it and took a fancy shellacking in the first four rounds and looked so bad the fans suspected Finkel of employing only one optic. Tucker tired badly near the end, after some determined persuasion by a series of surprising left hooks from the opposition, but still had enough left to take an unanimous decision.

By Ted Meier,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—One of the best shots on the basketball team—yet when he shoots he's so nearsighted he can hardly tell whether the ball goes through.

That's the strange case of Gerry Seeders which came to light today at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The rest of the fellows wonder how I do it," said Seeders, a sophomore from Pottstown, Pa., "but it's all luck. When I get set for a shot, all I can see is a black blur where the strings should be so I let fly."

To date, Seeders has scored 41 points, 23 of them against such tough opposition as Syracuse and Dartmouth, but until Roy Manzel, center from Stevens Point, Wis., told a friend, only his teammates knew Seeders was nearsighted.

"He's driving us nuts asking what the score is because he can't see the scoreboard," Menzel said laughingly.

"No, I can't always tell whether the ball goes through," said Seeders. "I have to judge that on how the team acts. I can see the white backboard and that helps a lot. I guess it's just from constant practice that I'm able to score at all. Even when I shoot fouls, the strings are very hazy."

"It's just like in a football game. Towards the end a haze settles over the field and the players are only dimly visible. Well, that's the way the basket looks to me.

"Sure, I tried to wear glasses, but I never could get used to them. I wore them the first year at Pottstown High, but they bothered me so much I discarded them for good. I haven't had any trouble since."

In passing Seeders has no difficulty unless the opposing team wears shirts composed of several colors. Then his teammates have to call for the pass and he throws towards the voice.

Charity Horse Show Begins at Ft. Myer Hall Tonight

This Morning

Braddock's 'Size' as Fighter Will Grow.

By Shirley Povich.

Jim Braddock hangs up his gloves in formal retirement from the prize ring and with fight fans he leaves the impression that he has been a pretty decent sort of chap, but not much of a champion. That will come later. I mean his recognition as an important figure in the company of heavyweight titleholders.

POVICH.

The passing years always add glamour and a certain legendary aspect to fistic champions. Both Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney failed to acquire during their fighting days the same high respect and regard they now enjoy as former fistic figures. Braddock's stature as a champion will also grow with the passage of time.

Tunney never was regarded as a top-notch champion when he held the title. There was a disposition to believe that in beating Dempsey he had beaten a tired, old man who was fair game for the first better-than-average fighter who happened along. The fact remains that Tunney was the first fighter ever to win the heavyweight title on a decision. He never quite fitted the popular conception of a heavyweight champion with a knockout punch.

Yet, since his retirement, Tunney has come to be regarded as a superior fistic champion. He is being used as an example of the smart fighter of by-gone fistic times. Virtually every attempt to belittle Champion Joe Louis ends up with the argument that Tunney would have stabbed him dizzy and cut him to ribbons. Tunney, in retirement, is being accorded the recognition that he never received as champion.

Dempsey, until he pemitted Tommy Gibbons to go the distance with him, and then lost to Tunney twice, was regarded as the ideal champion—"killer instinct" and all. But, strangely, Dempsey was not a popular champion during his fighting days. There were the "slacker" charges against him, and the widely publicized picture of the Manassa Mauler at a shipyard job in patent leather shoes did not contribute to his popular favor.

But sentiment toward Dempsey turned after he was beaten by Tunney. He evoked a wave of sympathy by his handlers' charges that he was doped before the first Tunney fight, and the long-count affair in Chicago won him new admirers. In retirement, Dempsey, too, has found popularity that was never his when he was champion. Every champion since his time has been compared to Dempsey, with conclusions most favorable to the old Master.

And years hence, Braddock, too, will come in for the high regard that former fistic figures always seem to inherit. Even during the past year there has been a disposition to regard Braddock in a more favorable light than he was held immediately after winning the title from Max Baer. And during the past year, in the only two fights he has attempted since winning the title, Braddock got himself knocked out in one.

When he came into the crown by outpointing Max Baer over the 15-round route, Braddock was not hailed as much of a champion. Like Tunney, he failed to win the title by a knockout. And the Baer that he beat was a fighting clown who neither trained seriously for the fight nor fought seriously in defense of this title.

Before that bout, Braddock was regarded as a washed-up veteran of the ring who was making a mildly amazing comeback against a lot of stumblebums on the fringe of the contender class. Only a year before winning the title he had been floored at the Garden Bowl by one Corn Griffith, a rank fourth-rater.

After he did succeed in outpointing Baer, there was no disposition to acclaim Braddock as a sensational addition to the company of heavyweight champions past or present. He didn't have a knockout punch and he never had been regarded as a smart ringster. His gameness was his chief stock in trade.

Yet, before his fight with Joe Louis, two years later, Braddock somehow gained popular recognition as the possessor of a wondrous left hand and a jarring right. He had never exhibited either, but as champion he was simply supposed apparently to possess those kind of punches. There was some reason to believe that he did have a jolting right, though, after he sat Joe Louis on the floor in the first round before succumbing to a knockout.

The really amazing feature of Braddock's career in the ring, aside from his spectacular rise from the relief roles to the championship, was his come-back against Tommy Farr. Beaten for eight rounds, he called on some unexpected source of stamina to carry the fight to Farr in the final two rounds and win the decision. Because that was his valedictory fight, Braddock doubtless will go down in history as the possessor of a vast reserve of energy, an attribute never accredited him in his younger and sprightlier days in the ring.

Ten, 20 years hence, unless the fistic routine changes, Braddock, the cheese champion, will be held up to the new generation of fans as one of the prize products of "the good old days" in the ring.

Star Riders To Compete For Honors

Mrs. Roosevelt Enters Event; Varied Program Listed.

With some of the finest horses and equestrians of the city scheduled to perform, the Fort Myer charity horse show for the benefit of the President's paralysis fund will start tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

The event will continue tomorrow night, with a revised program.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is scheduled to ride in the Road Hack Class tonight.

Tonight's schedule will also include an exhibition by Capt. Isaac L. Kitts on American Lady, and an exhibition musical drill by E Troop, Third Cavalry; a lady hunter's class; handy jumpers, over a difficult course, and the student jumping class.

Gunston Hall School has entered a team in the latter class, with Miss Anne Titus, Miss Beverley Easely, Miss Mary Katherine Willis and Miss Patricia Garrison representing the school. Miss Titus, of Washington, will ride her horse, Easy Money.

Wednesday night's card will feature an exhibition by F Troop, Wild West Riders, Battery Drill by A Battalion, 116th Field Artillery, and a handicap jumping class, open. Several other classes dot the program.

Virginia Military Institute and Pennsylvania Military School will compete in the student team jumping event.

The event is already assured of being a financial success as the advance sale is over the $3,000 mark. The remainder of the seats are priced at $2.50, $1.50 and $1.00.

Riding her chestnut mare, Dot, Mrs. Roosevelt will compete against Mary Crane's Porac, Kitty Smver's Lurline, and Anne Hagner's Phanton Lady in addition to several entries from the U. S. Randle stable.

Buxby, Harris Lead Advance

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Four seeded players advanced handily today as play opened in the Surf Club's annual tennis tournament, but Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, top-ranked in opposite brackets, delayed the start of their campaigns until tomorrow.

Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., seeded fifth, dropped Lewis Duff, of Miami, 6-1, 6-1, and sixth seeded Martin Buxby of Miami, overpowered Prince George Scherbatoff, of Palm Beach, 7-5, 6-3, in second-round matches. All had drawn first round byes.

Seventh-seeded Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, polished off George Walsh, a fellow townsman, 6-4, 6-1, and Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., advanced on a default by J. P. Stockton, of New York, in the first round.

Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., seeded fourth, failed to appear and defaulted to Lewis Faquin, of Miami, in a scheduled second-round match. Third-seeded Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., delayed his first-round match with Campbell Gillespie, of Miami, until tomorrow.

Bowie Increases Two Stake Values

Bowie, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—The Southern Maryland Agricultural Association announced today increase in value of two stake races for Bowie's spring meeting April 1-14.

D. C. Glovers Face Big Task

Speed Up Training for Boston Battlers.

Fully aware of the sizable task confronting them Friday night when they tangle with Boston's best amateur boxers, Washington's golden gloves champions stepped up their training pace yesterday in scattered gymnasiums.

The teams square off in Catholic University's big gym in a belated effort to raise funds for the Chief Executive's birthday ball fund, and a sell-out seems assured. Boston's representatives are among the East's best, and Washington's boys hope to demonstrate they are even better.

Already forewarned of the ability of no less than a half dozen invaders, the local team yesterday heard more bad news concerning two more visitors. Dick Volpe and Charley Morris, bantamweight and flyweight, respectively, are the newest additions to the danger list and both figure to star here.

Volpe, whose opponent will be Gilbert Mayo, a star in his own right, won the Massachusetts State championship in 1937 and '38, in addition to the Diamond Belt title in 1937 and New England All-America title the same year. During these years he won 15 arguments by knockouts.

Morris, a little Irishman, stole the show in the last All-America championships, which he won, and figures to be a favorite over Willie Tapp, his prospective opponent. Morris is a cutie, in ring parlance, as well as a paralyzing puncher, and is a great favorite in his home town.

Montgomery Blair Winner by 16 to 9

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 31.—Merle Thorpe, of Washington, D. C., finished among the leaders in the qualifying round of the eleventh annual championship of the Artists and Writers Golf Association at the Palm Beach Golf Club today with a card of 48—41—89, to land in the title division.

Frederick C. Painton, of Westport, Conn., writer, won the medal with 36—40—76, four strokes in front of Charles McAdam, of New York, who put together a pair of 40s. Rex Beach, noted novelist, followed with 43—40—83.

Low net honors went to Herb Roth, of Larchmont, N. Y., who had a gross of 88, a handicap of 25, and a net of 63. Floyd Parsons, of New York, was second with 88—20—68.

Hoyas Battle Rams Tonight

Georgetown to Invade New York City.

With a weather eye still focused on the lead of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball Conference, Georgetown University's Hoyas will invaded New York tonight to play Fordham.

Eagerly awaiting the opportunity of meeting Penn State here Saturday at Tech High and evening the count with the Lions, who defeated them ten days ago for the loop lead, the Hilltoppers meet the Rams before playing the Army five at West Point tomorrow.

The loss to Penn State, when the two teams were deadlocked for first place in the Eastern circuit, was a blow to the local team's conference hopes after it had defeated Temple and Pitt to gain the vantage point. Since then it has bowed to Syracuse, being trounced by the Orange Saturday.

Coach Fred Mesmer has his boys pointing for the Penn State game, the first of a long conference schedule, but would welcome victories over both Fordam and the Army. The Hoyas did not meet the Rams last season, but defeated the Soldiers, 40-37.

Monte Peason Signs 1938 Yankee Contract

Pearson rejected the Yanks' first offer, but signed the latest contract proffered because it contained a bonus clause that provides for additional pay if he has a "good" season. He took a slight salary cut.

Grid Stars Get Trophies

Local College Players to Be Honored.

The "most valuable" football player on each of the five college teams of the Washington area during the 1937 season tomorrow night will be presented with a trophy donated by the Washington Redskins. The second annual Touchdown Club all-sports banquet, at the Willard Hotel, will be the scene of the presentations.

The Redskins announced the award yesterday in a telegram from owner George Marshall to the banquet committee.

Designation of the players deemed "most valuable" has already been made by the Washington Football Writers Association. They are: Jim Meade, Maryland; Jay Turner, George Washington; Lawrence Hardy, Georgetown; Maurice Carroll, Catholic University, and Emerson Bartlett, American University.

The trophy to be presented each player measures 2 feet, is mounted on a ebony base and is in the form of a football player running with a ball.

Meade, in addition to receiving the Redskin's trophy, will also be presented with the handsome Arch McDonald trophy, voted him as the "most valuable" player among all Washington colleges.

Marshall, in announcing the award by the Redskins, telegraphed J. Leighton Cornell, of the banquet committee:

"The opportunity to contribute in a small way to the college football players in the city of Washington who were selected unanimously by the Football Writers Associatoin as being the most valuable to their respective teams comes with our congratulations and realization that these men were selected obviously from observation by watchful experts. We are eager to reward on merit men who have displayed willingness, ability and good sportsmanship and through their efforts have helped keep the sport on an impregnable amateur level."

Laurel High Five Meets Mt. Rainier In Crucial Game

Prince George's County High school basketball fans will watch with unusual interest the game between Mount Rainier and Laurel tonight at 8 p. m., to be played on the Laurel floor. Hyattsville has defeated the Laurel team twice and a loss for the Mounts would easily make Hyattsville the top-notch county aggregation.

Laurel will place the best team in the history of the school on the floor tonight in an effort to stop the Mounts, a team they have never beaten in basketball since the schools commenced a two-game-home-and-home series more than five years ago. During that five years, Mount Rainier won four county championships and Hyattsville one.

Laurel will start Mervin Benton and Olin Merson, forwards; Holten Merson, center; William Wenzel, Wallace Stanton or Kenneth Crawford, guards. Mount Rainier will depend upon Kenneth Taylor, Joe Glynn or Frank Landolt, forwards; Gregory O'Connor, center; James Miller and Robert Crump, guards.

Wilson Five And Western Clash Today

The first half of the interhigh basketball race will be completed this afternoon when Western battles Wilson at 3:30 o'clock at Roosevelt gym. The Meeting is most important for Western, since a victory would boost it into a triple tie, with Roosevelt and Eastern, for first place.

Wilson's experienced Presidents, although they won their first series game in history last week, are not expected to offer more than passing resistance to Cliff Moore's defending champions. However, Wilson has improved rapidly and is capable of providing an upset should Western falter.

The Georgetown team stakes its hopes on the broad shoulders of Center Len Stahton, and Bob Custer, a towering pair, who have accounted for the greater part of Western's points to date. Wilson, an unusually tall team, looks to Dave Maloney and Bill Hawksworth to start the fireworks.

Government Loop In Action Tonight

Action in the Government-Y Basketball League moves into its ninth straight week in the "Y" gym tonight, with main interest centered around the task of breaking the league-leading P. W. A. quint's string of victories, which totals eight in as many starts.

Though the pace setters are not slated for action tonight, plenty of action is promised in the fact that four of the six teams composing tonight's pairings are separated by a margin of only one game.

Tonight's schedule: Interstate Commerce Commission vs. Veterans' Administration, 7:10; Farm Credit vs. Patent Office, 8:20, and Bureau of Standards vs. National Archives, 9:30.

Draw Slated On Thursday For Cup Play

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The draw for the 1938 Davis Cup tennis competition will be made in the Pan-American Building, Washington, D. C., at 3 p. m. Thursday, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today as entries for the year's play closed.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull will officiate when the names of the competing nations are drawn from the historic trophy, which will be shipped from New York especially for the occasion. Ambassadors, ministers and chiefs of missions of the 25 nations which have challenged for the cup, won from England by the United States last year, will be invited to attend the ceremony.

The challenges of four nations in the American zone and 21 in the European zone, making a total of one more than last year's challengers, have been received so far and it is considered unlikely that any others, filed before the deadline, will be received later. Regulations require the draw to be held within three days following the American and European zone closing date.

Australia leads the American zone challengers. The others are Japan, Canada and Mexico. Entries in the European zone are Great Britain, Switzerland, India, Yugoslavia, Austria, Rumania, Greece, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Belgium, Italy, Poland, the Netherlands, Hungary, Germany, France, Ireland, New Zealand, Monaco, Sweden and Norway.

Jim McMillen Meets Brown

Jim McMillen, famous running mate of Red Grange at Illinois, will return to Washington Thursday night in a special added attraction on the card featuring Danno O'Mahoney and Hans Steinke at Turner's Arena.

McMillen never has wrestled at the Arena, and he will make his debut there in a 30-minute bout with Orville Brown, another grappler who rates among the first ten best in Promoter Joe Turner's book.

Featuring a "flying tackle," which paved the way for many a stirring touchdown jaunt by Grange in the red-haired's glamorous All-American days at Illini, McMillen is said to have lost none of his old-time fire and cunning.

McMillen has been running roughshod over opposition in the Midwest and on the Pacific Coast, and is back East battling for a top place on the mat ladder.

Brown, who is a big attraction on California mats, will present a new armlock which is said to be a take-off on the one Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy sprang the night he whipped Paddy Mack at the Arena.

Potomac Squadron Will Hold Lectures

The Potomac River Power squadron will hold its annual instruction classes for the purpose of promoting safety in motor boating at the United States Public Health auditorium, Constitution avenue, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets northwest, beginning Monday, February 14, at 8 p. m.

The first five lectures, illustrated by lantern slides, will cover rules of the road, whistle and fog signals, buoys, navigation lights, day marks and other aids to navigation. Lights required for all classes of boats, equipment required by law, the chart and its uses, the compass and explanation of its errors.

Three subsequent classes combining a brief lecture with group instruction will be held at Chestnut Farms Dairy Building and will take up practical piloting, plotting courses and determining position, safety at sea and seamanship. These classes are free to anyone interested.

New York, Jan. 31. — Branch Rickey, baseball's most famous "David Harum," says the 1938 Cardinals are the biggest "if" team in St. Louis history.

"They might win the National League pennant," admitted the St. Louis vice president and head of the Cards' farm system. "But on the other hand they might even—but why talk about that?"

• • • •

It was most unusual to find the gray-haired "father of chain store baseball" in a quandary regarding his estimate of a club's ability—particularly his own club. Because branch is recognized as one of the best judges of ability in the game. That's his specialty: Judging the comparative values of players.

• • • •

"We haven't won the pennant for three years, now," Branch continued, gazing benovelently over his spectacles. "And we have a great itch to take the flag this time. When I say 'we,' I am expressing the sentiments of President Sam Breadon and Manager Frankie Frisch, as well as myself. And in most of my statements about the Cardinals, I believe I am expressing the joint opinion for the three of us. After all, Mr. Breadon is the person most interested financially, and Mr. Frisch determines who takes the field and he is responsible for their success."

• • • •

It seems that the three master minds are agreed that the Cardinals will have a good outfield this season, with Pepper Martin shifting from right to centerfield, mighty Joe Medwick handling left field, and about six chaps competing for the right garden. The one who wins that berth will be a very good outfielder. As for the rest of the club, everything is "if."

• • • •

However, Rickey, speaking only for himself, figures that the Cardinals' catching will be of championship caliber when handled by Mickey Owen. Don Padgett will be converted from an outfielder to a second-string backstop, and if necessary Pitcher Jim Ryba can fill in behind the bat. A newcomer, Herbert Bremer, from Columbus, Ga., also may prove a big time catcher.

• • • •

"I figure we're all set behind the plate," Branch admitted, "but I guess I'm the only one who thinks so."

• • • •

Rickey, who came to New York for the baseball writers' dinner and various league conferences, said the Cards' infield and pitching problems were so great as to make the entire outfit a "colossal if club."

• • • •

How could Branch be so sure of his outfield when Duck-Walky Medwick threatened to be a big holdout. And Medwick happened to be the National League's batting champion and most valuable player for '37. And Medwick knows about Joe DiMaggio, of the Yankees, in the American circuit asking for $25,000 or $30,000.

• • • •

"I have great confidence in Joe Medwick," said Rickey blandly. "We'll give him every consideration. He is a great ball player and fine young fellow. We'll do our best for him. I don't think there will be any trouble there.

• • • •

"Yes—we have one holdout that may cause us trouble. That Infielder Joe Stripp who we obtained from Brooklyn. I believe he will be a serious holdout. Of course we don't figure men as holdouts until after April 15. But Mr. Stripp's evaluations of his own abilities are at such variance with ours that I'm sure we'll have trouble with him."

• • • •

Rickey figured that pitching was one of the big question marks. How could he feel that way, as he sat there in the Lincoln Hotel, when he knew that the Cards possessed the and only great Dizzy Dean?

• • • •

"Huh!" snorted Branch, "I'm not counting on Dizzy Dean at all this season. He proved to us in the closing stages of last season that we couldn't count on him—and nothing has happend since then to change our opinion. Would we trade him for Can Mungo, of the Dodgers? (Rickey smiled) Well—not quite. No—we're not trying to get Van Mungo. I think Larry MacPhail has swung Mungo into line for the Dodgers, and that's the best thing for Brooklyn and the rest of the league.

• • • •

"No—we're not counting on Paul Dean either. We have no reason to believe that his arm is any better now than it was last season. Certainly, he'll come down to camp at St. Petersburg, and we will find out. It seems that the only two starting pitchers we have are Lon Warneke and Bob Weiland. We're not sure of anyone else. But there will be about 15 trying out at St. Pete."

Outlaw Signs.

Cincinnati, Jan. 31 (AP).—Jimmy Outlaw, stellar rookie third baseman, today became the eighteenth member of the Cincinnati Reds to sign a contract.

Co-Sport Winner of Hialeah Park Feature

Sketchbook Takes Place; Crepe Shows

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla. Jan. 31. Co-Sport, Flamingo Stakes candidate of Birt Friend, scored his first victory in three local starts when he led home a half dozen other 3-year-olds in the featured Barstow Handicap of 7 furlongs here today. The gelded son of Cohort, recently second to the classy Lawrin, won in handy fashion by a length and a half, finishing in 1:24 4-5 to pay the talent $3.60 for $2.

W. J. Hirsch's Sketchbook headed B. F. Whitaker's Crepe for the place. All in the field except Sketchbook, Polyata and Birdlea were named for the Flamingo.

Co-Sport, winner of 10 of his 23 1937 outings, forced Crepe's early pace, overtook that colt around the bend and drew away under his 122 pounds. Sketchbook also wore down Crepe in the final drive.

Although Co-Sport was the fourth successful choice in five races, it was really a "blue" Monday in another respect. Hernani (Henri) Mora, highly promising apprentice lad, whose contract recently was purchased by Townsend B. Martin, fell with his mount, Sweeping Blaze, near the three-eighths pole and suffered a broken collarbone. He was removed to Jackson Memorial Hospital and is due to rest on the sidelines nearly a month. Mora, with one winner today, was far in front of other apprentices for the meeting. The little Cuban had 10 winners. He loses his five pounds apprentice allowance February 10, so will be a full-fledged jockey when next he rides.

Tilaana, the $5.90 favorite, led all the way under a hustling ride by Eddie Arcaro. The filly lasted in a drive to win by a head from the fast-closing Memoirs, while Irish Oak was three lengths farther back.

Hugh W. Jackson's Bulwark, recently soundly beaten, came busting out of the mile chute well clear of his field and never was menaced in the Seminole Purse, the secondary attraction of the day. Under the light burden of 104 pounds, the gelding breezed along with nothing to fear and Jockey Porter Roberts looked back in the stretch. Bulwark had a length and a half to spare over Teufel, a Wheatley Stable Widener Cup hopeful, which always outran the others. Maecloud lost the place by a length. Bulwark paid $14.50 and finished the eight furlongs in 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BULWARK, $14.50, $6.80, $3.90; TEUFEL, $4.80, $3.60; MAECLOUD, $3.20.

BULWARK outbroke the field, drew out into an easy lead the opening quarter mile, then steadied in front and held sway throughout, winning under mild urging. TEUFEL broke well and went in nearest pursuit of the pace all the way, responded gamely to pressure, but could not reach the winner. MAECLOUD slipped through on the inside in the run down the backstretch and then was taken outside in the last quarter and finished resolutely.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:02. Winner, Mrs. R. Chambers' ch. g. (4), by Sun God II—Erins Bride. Trained by E. Davidson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:41, 2:07 4-5, 2:36 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ERINS SUN, $28.40, $17.70, $6.70; BOLD PIRATE, $15.90, $6.40; EASIEST WAY, $3.10.

ERINS SUN took command at once, held the opposition safe for speed, was raised in front and maintained a clear lead the entire trip. BOLD PIRATE, well up, but racing wide all the way, closed stoutly under punishment through the stretch and wore EASIEST WAY down in the last strides. EASIEST WAY, going forwardly while saving ground, under light restraint in the early running, finished gamely, but Haas lost a stirrup iron a sixteenth from the finish and was weakened in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:34. Off at 5:34½. Winner, Woolford Farm's br. or blk. h. (5), by Bostonian—Lady Supreme. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:11 2-5, 1:37 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TILAANA, $5.90, $4.40, $3.40; MEMOIRS, $5.40, $3.60; IRISH OAK, $7.00.

TILAANA quickest to begin, set a fast early pace and, saving ground throughout, responded determinedly to punishment and outlasted MEMOIRS when the real test came. MEMOIRS, outrun in the opening half mile, came around the leaders entering the stretch, gained steadily and was wearing the winner down in the closing strides. IRISH OAK, prominent contender all the way, held on gamely in the stretch drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COSPORT, $3.60, $2.90, $2.40 SKETCHBOOK, $3.80, $2.70; CREPE, $2.80.

COSPORT, going forwardly under slight restraint in the early stages, responded with determination when called upon, shook off CREPE and maintained his lead under brisk urging to the finish. SKETCHBOOK, on the inside and under intermittent punishment the first 3 furlongs, came around the leaders entering the stretch, closed gamely and wore CREPE down in the final drive. CREPE, away fast, showed high early speed while saving ground, but faltered in the stretch run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BULWARK, $14.50, $6.80, $3.90; TEUFEL, $4.80, $3.60; MAECLOUD, $3.20.

BULWARK outbroke the field, drew out into an easy lead the opening quarter mile, then steadied in front and held sway throughout, winning under mild urging. TEUFEL broke well and went in nearest pursuit of the pace all the way, responded gamely to pressure, but could not reach the winner. MAECLOUD slipped through on the inside in the run down the backstretch and then was taken outside in the last quarter and finished resolutely.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:02. Scribner Made Local Head of Mackay Radio

Succeeds E. J. Girard Who Becomes Sales Manager of Federal Telegraph.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Roy N. Scribner succeeds Edward J. Girard as District manager for the Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. in Washington. Prior to his appointment here, Mr. Scribner held the position of traffic manager for the Mackay system with headquarters in New York City.

Mr. Girard, who has been in charge of the Washington office for the past 3½ years, has been appointed sales manager for the Federal Telegraph Co., a concern associated with the Mackay system. He will take over his new duties at the company's headquarters in Newark, N. J., today.

Connecticut Mutual.

"Increasing $39,178,859 during 1937, life insurance in force in the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. now stands at the highest point in its history, $979,141,068," states John Lister McElfresh, general agent for the company in Washington. New paid-for life insurance sales during 1937 amounted to $95,659,018, an increase of 7.9 per cent over the previous year.

The company's annual statement, which has just been released, shows that its admitted assets are also at a new high, totaling $312,233,793. This is an increase of $20,804,299 over the previous year. Premium income of company increased during the year from $37,717,376 to $40,239,763, and total income from $55,626,964 to $58,618,880.

Total payments to policyholders and beneficiaries during 1937 amounted to $25,737,633, $4,417,624 of which was in dividends. The total paid to policyholders and beneficiaries since organization in 1846 amounts to $663,076,866. Mortality of the company has been very satisfactory, being 54.5 per cent of the expected. Mr. McElfresh states that net investment income after all investment expenses on mean ledger assets for 1937 was 3.77 per cent, as compared with 3.75 per cent for 1936. The surplus of the company increased during the year from $10,858,887 to $11,100,968.

Tribute to Phillips.

Services of Alexander Keene Phillips, secretary of Potomac Insurance Co., have been recognized by a resolution of the company's board of directors on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of his connection with the organization. The resolution states, in part:

"Resolved by his fellow directors that recognition of this auspicious occasion be placed on record in the minutes of this meeting in affectionate appreciation of his many years of loyal devotion, not only in the interests of our company, but to the wider interests of the insurance business as a whole."

Christmas Savings.

Present at the meeting besides Mr. Phillips were George W. White, chairman of the board; A. A. Hoehling, C. F. R. Ogibly, Thomas C. Moore and Charles E. Hood.

C. & P. Tel. Net Lower in Year

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomas Telephone Co. for last year were $11,137,467, according to Charles A. Robinson, general manager. This is an increase of $540,454 over 1936, but Mr. Robinson called attention to the fact that operating expense for 1937, amounting to $8,069,908, was an increase of $532,728 over the previous year, largely due to wage increases. Taxes increased 10 per cent in 1937 over 1936, amounting to $980,044 in 1937, as compared with $867,323 the previous year, and interest deductions were $268,892, in comparison with $182,790 in 1936. As a result, the balance before dividends for 1937, amounting to $1,869,685, was $156,653 less than 1936.

Telephones in service were increased over the previous month by 738, there being 226,957 telephones in service in December 31, 1937. A year ago there were 214,308 telephones in service. Telephone users in Washington made 28,213,000 calls during the month, or an increase of 3,156,000 over December, 1936. There were 302,143,000 telephone calls made in Washington in 1937.

Gas Light Gains.

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission showed operating revenues of $831,082 for December, compared with $757,417 for December a year ago, an increase of $73,665. Operating expenses decreased $8,626 from $576,308 in December, 1936, to $567,682 in December, 1937. Nonoperating revenues amounted to $11,034, compared with $30,403 for December a year ago. The net result of the month's operation after all deductions for interest and amortization was a net income of $195,204, compared with $131,183 for December, 1936.

Net earnings for the 12 months of 1937 amounted to $761,426, compared with $666,743 for the 12 months of 1936.

Wheat Prices Rise With Severe Cold

Also Year-End Surplus Is Expected to Be Under Estimates.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Precarious crop conditions reported in widespread domestic winter wheat areas Southwest and West did much to make Chicago wheat values average higher today.

A severe cold wave, together with inadequate snow protection, was reported. In addition, figures from the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics suggested a year-end surplus of only 120 to 125 million bushels in this country July 1 next. These figures contrasted sharply with recent private estimates that the carryover would total 200,000,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¾ of a cent higher; May, 93@93⅛; July, 88@88⅛. Corn, ¼@¾ down; May, 58⅞@59; July, 59½@59⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ off. Rye showing ⅛@½ setback, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents up.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregularly Higher in Slow Trading; Steels, Motors, Rails Favored.

New York, Jan. 31.—Most financial and commodity markets developed a firmer tone and although price movements were uncertain at times and activity was only moderate at best the day brought improvement on balance. Stock sales were under a million shares and prices were firmer at the close, after eight consecutive days of falling prices. United States Government bonds hardened a little. Francs were up a little. May wheat closed a quarter of a cent higher at 93 cents a bushel.

Week-end light thrown upon the state of business scarcely justified any bullish operations in stock or bond markets, although there was little, on the other hand, that justified any addition to pessimism. The first month of the new year has brought little or no sign of that resumption of activity (except for some buying of a replacement nature in consumption goods) which it had been hoped would be seen around the corner of the new year. January nevertheless has carried us 31 days nearer the spring, when the reopening of the outdoor trades, particularly building construction and agriculture, may be counted upon to give a bit of a fillip to industrial activity.

Statistics on trade were not encouraging. Debits to individual accounts, a measure of the activity in commercial as well as in speculative pursuits, again fell last week. The decline from the previous week was 10 per cent and 19 per cent from the corresponding period of a year ago. This week's operating rate of the steel industry, as estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute, dropped from 32.7 per cent of capacity to 30.5 per cent. The decline is the first interruption to the recovery which began with the new year. It is probably less significant of a fresh setback in the steel trade than it is a reminder that steel buying is still on a hand-to-mouth basis, subject to fits and starts.

Inflation Hope.

If the steel trade in ordinary business reflects unsatisfactory conditions, the steel company stocks, along with other issues in the groups likely to profit from rearmament, on the one hand, and an attempt at inflating credit, on the other, held a fairly steady tone most of the day. United States Steel at its best sold more than 2 points above last week's last price. Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Smelters, Westinghouse and a number of other active issues rose 1 to 2 points after a slow start, but weakened in the late trading. American Telephone, which is more likely to feel restraint than greater freedom and activity in the early stages of inflation, was noticeably weak and acted as a drag on other parts of the market. After a stubborn resistance at the 140 line the shares advanced above that figure.

The longer the country goes without convincing signs of recovery and the greater the inroads of unemployment, price cutting and wage reductions, the greater the probability of a resumption of high scale spending and other measures taken by the Administration calculated to revive the markets and business while dodging the real issues. Because they are expecting inflation and because, in some cases, they are hoping for it, stock market and commodity market followers are taking the current dullness with magnificent resignation. The worse things become, they feel, the more certain it will be that the stimulant will be administered.

Dollar Flight.

Observers of the foreign exchange market today noticed that the flight from the dollar was not dissimilar, though on a smaller scale, to that of November, when the pound got up to $5.03 cents and the American monetary authorities lost gold selling foreign currencies, notably sterling, to support dollars. The pound today rose well above $5.01, while francs, stimulated by the rise in the pound, were up slightly.

Last November the United States shipped about $25,000,000 of gold to France and $5,000,000 to England, but the actual loss was much more because of metal earmarked, or sold from foreign holdings of the stabilization fund, which did not figure in the monetary statistics. If the American fund sells enough metal or earmarks enough to exhaust its supply and forces resort to the Treasury's sterilized gold hoard, then only will it be visible in official figures.

Stock Movements.

Leading railroad stocks were marked up 1 to 2 points at the best, a singular development in these days of pessimism over the plight of the roads and of weak markets generally. Presumably the approach of the date on which higher freight rates are possible and the extent of the liquidation in the rail stocks accounted for the mild recovery. Unless they are going directly into bankruptcy a number of the stronger railroads now find their stocks selling at prices that ought to appeal to the jaded appetites of speculators if not of investors. The selling of Telephone which took place on more than a score of sales at 140 looked to be for an estate or large investment trust which had found a buyer willing to take on a supply at that price. Consolidated Edison was sustained by the declaration of the usual dividend. Most of the utility groups were firm.

January Sales.

January turns out to have been the poorest month for stock trading since August of last year, and in fact the behavior of the market on many days was cut to the pattern of midsummer trading. Stock turnover for the 25 days of this month was approximately 24,500,000 shares. The nearest January with so small a turnover was in 1935, when sales were 19,409,000 shares. The most active day was the tenth, with 1,826,000 shares, and the smallest was the twenty-fifth, with 535,000 shares. Twenty-three of the most active stocks made up 30 per cent of the total turnover. Steel, General Motors and Bethlehem had sales volume of more than 600,000 shares each. Chrysler and Anaconda had sales in excess of half a million. Other leaders with more than 300,000 shares were Nickel, New York Central, Republic Steel, U. S. Rubber and Yellow Truck.

Steel Operations Slip to 30.5 Per Cent

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 2.2 points to 30.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 32.7 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 25.6 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 79.6 per cent.

National Steel Reports Jump In 1937 Net

Earned $17,801,893, or $8.21 a Share; $5.80 in Previous Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—The National Steel Corporation in a preliminary report for 1937 showed today net earnings of $17,801,893 after Federal tax on undistributed earnings. This equaled $8.21 a share on the capital stock and compared with profit of $12,541,842, or $5.80 a share, in 1936. For the final quarter of 1937 net before the Federal profits surtax was $2,580,925, or $1.19 a share, against $4,628,729, or $2.14 a share in the final quarter of 1936 and $5,227,071, or $2.41 a share, in the third quarter of 1937.

Mathiesen Alkali.

Mathieson Alkali Works, Inc., reported today net income of $1,664,183 for 1937, equal to $1.81 a share on the common stock. This compares with $1,628,480 or $1.76, in 1936. The company's principal plants are at Saltville, Va., Niagara Falls and Lake Charles, La.

Deere & Co.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Deere & Co., of Moline, Ill., today reported net income for the fiscal year ended October 31 of $14,936,476, compared with $11,610,306 the preceding fiscal year. This was equivalent to $4.24 a common share after preferred stock requirements, compared with $9.38 a common share on the smaller volume of outstanding stock a year previous. Net sales increased 40 per cent to $100,399,710.

Incomes Reach 67.534 Billion For Last Year

Sum Is 5.5% More Than 1936 but 15% Under Peak Reached in 1929.

New York, Jan. 31.—Total national income received by individuals in 1937 amounted to $67,534,000,000, having increased by 5.5 per cent over the $63,984,000,000 total received in 1936, according to preliminary estimates just released by the National Industrial Conference Board. The 1936 total was somewhat abnormal due to the distribution by the Government of over $1,800,000,000 in payment of the soldiers' bonus in that year and less than $20,000,000 in 1937. The rate of income receipt in 1937 was still 15 per cent below the peak of $79,101,000,000 reached in 1929.

The 5.5 per cent increase in national income from 1936 to 1937 was not as great in terms of actual goods and services purchasable as in dollars, since the cost of living was 4.4 per cent higher in the latter year.

Of the total national income in 1937, some $61,325,000,000 was derived from producing industries and regular Government services. The remaining 10 per cent was derived from other accountable income items, such as net rent and interest on owned homes, pensions, direct and work relief, soldiers' bonus, and Government payments to farmers. The decrease in these items under the 1936 total amounted to 23 per cent, the drop in soldiers' bonus distributions and a curtailment of a quarter of a billion dollars in Government relief accounting for the decline.

Of the production income total in 1937, about $42,400,000,000, or 69 per cent, was accounted for by salaries and wages, which showed a rise of 11 per cent over 1936. Dividend distributions increased, partly under the stimulus of the undistributed profits tax, by slightly more than 10 per cent above 1936. They accounted for 7 per cent of total production income. The 1937 amount was about $4,450,000,000. Interest showed little change, with a 1937 volume of approximately $2,600,000,000. Net rents and royalties were still under $1,000,000,000, increasing about 9 per cent over 1936. Entrepreneurial income, primarily net profits of farmers and retail store proprietors, increased about 6 per cent in 1937, to a total or approximately $11,000,000,000.

WPA Relief Rolls May Take 82,500 More in February

By the Associated Press.

The Works Progress Administration announced yesterday it was preparing to increase rolls by 82,500 during February because of seasonal drops in private employment.

Officials said the increases, if all tentative quotas were filled, would bring total WPA employment to 1,914,461, compared with 1,831,961 employed on Federal and State projects on January 22.

They added that available funds would not permit a continuation of such a heavy load.

February quotas and the increase over the previous month for other States included District of Columbia, 7,000 and 200; West Virginia, 35,000 and 2,000.

Salvation Army To Welcome Dodd

Maj. Charles Dodd, who succeeds Brigadier James Asher as commander of the District Division, Salvation Army will arrive here tomorrow to take over his new command.

The new commander and his wife, who came from Jacksonville, Fla., will be guests at a welcome meeting, next Friday night in the Army auditorium, 606 E street northwest.

Maj. Dodd served as divisional secretary for some time, leaving here to go to Baltimore, from where he transferred to Jacksonville.

G. W. to Offer Course For Camp Counselors

Sponsored by George Washington University in co-operation with the Council of Social Agencies, a 12-week course of training for camp counselors will open on the university February 10.

The class will meet every Thursday at 7:30 p. m. for talks by local and national camping leaders, general discussion and recreational activities.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Beveridge Webster, pianist, and Benno Rabinov, violinist (Bertha Rich, accompanist) in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Monday morning. Program: Prelude and Toccata (Ravel), Impromptu in F sharp major, Fantasia in F minor (Chopin), Poissons d'Or, La Catherdale Engloutie, L'Isle Joyeuse (Debussy), Chaconne (Vitali), Nocturne (Szymanovski), The Wind (Vecsey), Alt Wien (Godovski), Horra Staccato (Dinicu-Heifetz), Variations on Paisiello's "Nel cor piu non mi sento" (Paganini).

No stranger to the auditors before whom he made his first appearance two seasons ago, Beveridge Webster opened the program of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's 103d Musical Morning yesterday with an expert performance of Ravel's Prelude and Toccata, a work of exterior brilliance and inner emptiness. His crisp and dry reading was well suited to the mildly ironic content of the music. Interpretative coloring was reserved for the F sharp major Impromptu and F minor Fantasia of Chopin, and for the three impressionistic pieces by Debussy.

Technically skilled and always sure of his dynamic control, Mr. Webster has a forthright style which makes his expositions more positive than subtle. From the manner of his playing one surmises that his temperamental ardency is held in leash by refinement of taste, and that his expressive effects are carefully calculated. An interesting artist because of his clarity and directness, he impresses one as an interpreter whose predilections are more intellectual than romantic.

Benno Rabinov, a newcomer to Washington, has a mastery of all the tricks and devices of the violin virtuoso. Since their display occupied most of his share of the program, one's judgment about his other artistic resources must be held in abeyance. His reading of the Vitali chaconne, while assured and poised, was not sufficient to disclose his ability as an interpreter, and his tone seemed lacking in eloquence.

As far as fleetness and dexterity are concerned, he is a brilliant performer with a superlative technique. There were hints of poesy in his treatment of the Szymanovski nocturne and of sentiment in Godovski's "Alt Wien," but these brief disclosures were dimmed by the scintillance of his bravura playing. It would appear that there is no difficulty in violin literature that he cannot surmount with ease.

By an odd coincidence, three of Paganini's old-fashioned caprices on operatic themes have emerged from the past within a week. Mr. Rabinov closed yesterday's recital with the variations on "Nel cor piu non mi sento" from Paisiello's "La Molinara;" the previous afternoon Yehudi Menuhin played the G-string variations on "Dal tuo stellato soglio" from Rossini's "Mose in Egitto," and last Monday Orlando Barera offered the variations on "Di tanti palpiti" from Rossini's "Tancredi."

STUDEB

Bob Burns Says—

I suppose Los Angeles has more soap-box orators than any other city of its size in the country. Every evening they gather in a square down town and each one of 'em seems to have the solution to the world's problems. It seems like they all want 'a stamp out somethin.'

The other day I heard one of 'em talkin' for over an hour and the only one that listened to him was an old man. Finally the orator looked down and he says "Brother, are you with me to stamp out this political evil?" The old man says, "No, I ain't interested."

The orator says, "Well, then, why have you stood there all this time?" and the old man says, "Well, Brother, I'm a stranger in town and I jest got a little lonesome."

Mrs. Roosevelt To Make Radio Plea for China

Red Cross Announces Generous Response to Appeal for Refugees.

Mrs. Roosevelt will broadcast an appeal for the Red Cross China Relief Fund over a national network of the Columbia Broadcasting System at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

The response since the plea for aid to Chinese noncombatants was first announced a week ago has been very gratifying, Red Cross officials said yesterday. Contributions through the District chapter total $460.50 to date.

A cablegram from the Manila Red Cross Chapter stated that $3,500 has already been raised, while a total contribution of $50,000 is anticipated from residents of the Philippine Islands.

The desperate situation of civilian refugees in the Shanghai area was graphically described in a cablegram received yesterday from Clarence E. Gauss, honorary vice president of the American Advisory Committee in Shanghai, the agency which will distribute the funds donated in this country.

Dead men, women and children totaling 4,681 were found in the streets and alleys of Shanghai in December, Gauss reported. The victims were all refugees, beggars and impoverished civilians dead from starvation or wounds.

"From the health aspect it is indeed not improbable that the coming spring and summer months will reflect more fully the recent disturbances, and infectious diseases generally are likely to exact a heavy toll," he said.

The sum of $1.25, according to Gauss, will care for one Chinese for a month, giving food, shelter and medical care, every dollar contributed being spent through the American Advisory Committee in China, without deduction for administrative expense.

Contract Bridge

The Wrong Fear.

Shrewd play is, at times, nothing more than the ability to choose the lesser of two evils. This sounds easy. But, considering that many a declarer has tossed away his contract simply because he took the wrong precautions, appearances must be deceptive.

North, dealer.

	♠ 9 3 ♡ K J 5 ◇ 7 6 5 ♣ A K Q 8 2
♠ Q 8 4 2 ♡ A 6 ◇ K Q 10 9 8 ♣ 9 5	North West East South	♠ A J 6 5 ♡ 8 7 3 2 ◇ 2 ♣ 10 6 4 3
	♠ K 10 7 ♡ Q 10 9 4 ◇ A J 4 3 ♣ J 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

North did not feel justified in encouraging South by raising the heart bid immediately. He rightly chose merely to rebid his club suit, to "mark time" and thus to see whether or not South cared to go further.

West opened the diamond King. Declarer, to induce a diamond continuation that would assure him two diamond stoppers and tricks, ducked. West, however, did not "fall." Quite well aware that declarer was probably attempting a Bath coup, West refused to be a victim. Instead he made the perfectly normal and logical shift to a low spade—the very move that declarer should have anticipated. East won with the ace and returned with his original fourth best spade. Declarer was now helpless—the defenders were establishing three spade tricks before their heart ace was removed, and these in addition to the diamond trick originally surrendered were sufficient to defeat the contract.

The difficulty had been that declarer had feared something harmless and had overlooked a real menace. With four diamonds to the ace-jack in his own hand and three in dummy's, there was no threat in the diamond situation. The first trick should have been snatched without hesitation and the heart suit immediately attacked. If East took the lead and had another diamond to lead through declarer, that would mean that West's diamond suit could be no longer than four cards and in fact, since the jack would still be twice guarded, it could not be trapped by one lead through. Had declarer held even three low diamonds with the ace, he should not have ducked; surely the fortunate possession of the jack should not have been his undoing. It required no great imagination to see that, upon ducking, a spade shift would be imminent.

Girdletree Mail Moves 130 Miles On 7-Mile Route

Snow Hill, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—A letter travels 130 miles en route from Snow Hill to Girdletree—just 7 miles away.

Train mail clerks unlock the pouch, sort the mail and toss the Girdletree letter into another pouch, which is tossed off the train to be picked up by a southbound train.

Another bus picks it up there and takes it to Girdletree—4 miles away.

Man Inflating Tire Hurt as 'Blowout' Breaks Wheel Rim

James Cansler, colored, 28, 2539 M street northwest, was injured seriously in a freak accident while he was inflating a tire on a five-ton truck at Thirteenth and M streets northeast.

Ramsey Black, who rose from the postmastership at Harrisburg, Pa., to the office of Third Assistant Postmaster General—succeeding Clinton B. Eilenberger—takes the oath of office at 11:30 a. m. today. The ceremony will be held in the Postmaster General's office . . . Uncle Sam's workers who are ardent stamp collectors will be interested to know that the pen the President used in signing S. 2550 was given as a souvenir to William M. Stuart, The Post's stamp authority. The law, under the bill's provisions, now permits the illustration of United States postage stamps in black and white in newspapers and other periodicals. Stuart was a leader in the fight for the bill, which the President affirmed . . .

For men only: The Civil Service Commission announces examinations for stenographers and typists, junior and senior grades, to be open to men applicants only. For these positions there is already an adequate register of female eligibles. Applicants must have reached their eighteenth but not passed their fifty-third birthday. This examination is to be held only at certain places in the States of Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia and the District. The closing date is February 17 . . . Someone comes in to ask again the time-beaten question: "What will the A. F. G. E. and the U. F. W. A. do when Lewis and Green make peace?" And we said for the 1,900th time that we have no way of knowing, since Jacob Baker has refrained from commenting and Charles I. Stengle won't say a word . . .

"The trouble is with the 2,800 or so U. F. A. members the A. F. G. E. expelled," our caller went on. "The A. F. G. E. probably would be reconciled to the affiliation of the U. F. W. A. people who weren't involved in the memorable expulsion, but the A. F. G. E. probably won't want to take in those it has kicked out," said he, asking us to write something about it. Which is cheerfully done, by way of wasting space. Some time ago this column said, reluctantly, that it saw no way the ousted A. F. G. E. members could ever return to the fold and stay there peaceably. The temperament of the two groups varies too much, are too incompatible. This view, sadly, is still held. Maybe some master mind will figure how they can get together. This column, not knowing the answer, may just as well not speculate.

The New York State Society holds its next dance at the Shoreham Hotel on Saturday, February 12, between 10 and 1. Guest tickets may be secured at the door. Favors will be distributed. The society wants members. If you're from New York and interested, contact Maurice E. Sands, 410 Eleventh street northeast, Lincoln 2236, or Room 5408, ICC . . . The North Carolina Democratic Club dines and dances in honor of its Congressional delegation Friday evening at the Raleigh Hotel . . . The Virginia Society, the largest in town and having a preponderance of Federal employes as members, goes in for the historical elements at its February dance, to be held at the Willard on the 21st. They write us about it, as follows:

"The program, preceding the dance, will be in pageant form, centering around Virginia's decision on whether or not to ratify the Constitution. The Continental Congress meeting in New York has transmitted to Virginia the Constitution framed in Philadelphia by the convention presided over by George Washington. The convention called to re-enact the ratification or rejection of the Constitution meets at the Willard. At present, it is very doubtful what action the convention will take but everyone predicts the vote will be very close. The proposed Constitution will be bitterly assailed by an impersonated George Mason because it does not contain a Bill of Rights, as does the Virginia State Constitution adopted in 1776. Patrick Henry will again fight the adoption vigorously because he believes it grants the Federal Government too much power. The Constitution will be defended by Gov. Edmund Randolph and by James Madison, of Orange. Members of the socetiy will impersonate all of these characters."

And in the sidelines will be none other than Sol Bloom, historian No. 1. Which means the Virginians had better get their lines straight and keep their powdered wigs on right. But it ought to be a good party, what with so many people, in costume, dancing the minuet.

A tranquil spot is discovered in the sometimes-embattled Interior Department: They've put in a bright collection of uniquely carved walrus tusks from Alaska along with many unusual specimens of beadwork, blanket weaving and basketry craftsmanship as executed by North American Indians. The exhibits were assembled by the Museum Division of the Park Service, in furtherance of the policy for preservation of valuable historical objects.
